Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer of 24 October, Official Report, column 423, if he will provide a statistical analysis showing the (i) number of people and (ii) proportion of the total register who have volunteered information that they are members of (a) the Conservative party, (b) the Liberal Democrats, (c) the Labour party, (d) the Ulster Unionist party, (e) the Social Democratic and Labour party, (f) Plaid Cymru, (g) the Scottish National party, (h) the Democratic Unionist party, (i) the Popular Unionist party and (j) the Green party.

The Prime Minister: Nominees on the public appointments unit's register are not required to give any details of their political affiliation, but can volunteer it if they wish. Some 87·5 per cent. of nominees do not volunteer any information, and therefore no information about their affiliation is held.

The analysis of those who have volunteered to the public appointments unit the nature of their political affiliation is as follows:

Political party	Number	Percentage
Conservative	409	8·0
Labour	132	2·6
Liberal Democrats	50	1·0
Social Democratic Party	46	0·9
Green Party	1	0·02
Welsh Nationalist	1	0·02
Total	639	12·5
Total number on register	5,095

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer of 24 October, Official Report, column 423, if his Office (a) adds information concerning the political affiliation of nominees on the public appointments unit's register, when it is known but not volunteered or (b) have access to other lists that provide such information.

The Prime Minister: No.

"Questions of Procedure for Ministers"

Dr. Wright: To ask the Prime Minister what plans he has to revise "Questions of Procedure for Ministers".

The Prime Minister: I have no plans to do so at present. If the Committee on Standards in Public Life makes recommendations in respect of the conduct of Ministers I will, of course, consider whether "Questions of Procedure for Ministers" should be revised in the light of the recommendations.

Mr. Ghazanfer Ali

Mr. Madden: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make a statement about the current position in the case of Mr. Ghazanfer Ali detained in prison in Azad Kashmir.

The Prime Minister: We continue to raise this case with the Pakistani authorities and await their response. Officials discussed it informally with Sardar Qayyum Khan of Azad Kashmir on 31 October.

Engagements

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for the evening of 28 May 1993.

The Prime Minister [holding answer 31 October 1994]: I attended a function in my constituency.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Haiti

Mr. Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the situation in Haiti.

Mr. Baldry: We welcome the return of President Aristide, and congratulate the UN Secretary-General and the Organisation of American States on their efforts to restore the democratically elected Government.

The situation in Haiti remains calm. We hope that conditions will continue to improve, promoting regional stability, and that the return of President Aristide will bring about an end to human rights abuses in Haiti, and engender an atmosphere of reconciliation, allowing the return home to a secure environment of the thousands of migrants who fled Haiti during the years since the coup.

Rwanda

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the situation in Rwanda.

Mr. Baldry: The situation in Rwanda is relatively stable, although still tense. The new Government have declared their intention of encouraging refugees and displaced persons to return home. We are doing what we can to assist this process.

Palestine

Mr. Butterfill: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action he is taking to assist the peace process between Israel and the Palestinian people.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We fully support the continuing negotiations and will provide £75 million to the Palestinians over the next three years.

Russia

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to promote the cause of democratic reform in Russia; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We shall continue to give our full support to the process of democratic and economic reform in Russia through the know-how fund and other means. The know-how fund, through its programme for democracy, has funded a number of projects this year including a symposium for newly elected Duma deputies.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what matters in regard to nuclear terrorism, nuclear safeguards and nuclear materials control were raised with the Russian Government on his recent visit to Russia.

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 20 October 1994]: Nuclear matters were not discussed during my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary's visit to Russia.

These issues were last discussed bilaterally with the Russians in the ambit of President Yeltsin's recent visit to the United Kingdom. Since then there has been a meeting of the Group of Eight informal consultation on non-proliferation at which the question of the smuggling of nuclear material was discussed.

Mozambique

Mr. Hunter: To ask the secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has recently made to, or received from, the main political parties in Mozambique in respect of the peace process and general election in that country.

Mr. Baldry: We have made continuous ministerial and other diplomatic contacts to promote the peace process. On 27 October my right hon. and noble Friend Baroness Chalker wrote to Mr. Dhlakama, the President of RENAMO to urge him to withdraw his boycott of the elections. I am pleased to say that he did so, following this and wider international pressure.

Eastern Europe

Sir Michael Neubert: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on how many occasions this year he has visited countries in eastern Europe to discuss democratic development there.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: This year my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has paid visits to Poland and the Czech Republic. He has visited Russia three times, and has also been to Ukraine, Latvia and Estonia.

South Africa

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on relations between the United Kingdom and South Africa.

Mr. Baldry: The United Kingdom's relations with the new South Africa are excellent. They are built on long-standing historical, personal, economic and cultural ties. The Government are committed to supporting the revival of South Africa's economy, which is essential for its reconstruction and development, and promoting bilateral trade and investment.

My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister's visit to South Africa in September included the announcement of a "fellowship for the future". We have established a practical framework for co-operation across a wide range of activities. My right hon. Friend and President Mandela signed agreements on aid, investment protection and military assistance. Our opportunity South Africa campaign aims at expanding our strong trade and investment base. We have also proposed practical support for health care, education, community policing, small business development, agriculture, sport, science and technology, and public administration. Parliamentary and ministerial links are being established in all these areas.

The Government are delighted that South Africa has joined the family of democratic nations and returned to the Commonwealth. The next task is to promote the stability and growth which will be essential for fulfilling the legitimate aspirations of all South Africa's people. All of Africa will benefit from that process.

Pakistan

Mr. Patnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he will make a statement on British relations with Pakistan.

Mr. Baldry: Our relations with Pakistan are in excellent shape. We look forward to Ms Bhutto's visit next month.

Kuwait

Mr. Carrington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what initiatives Her Majesty's Government are taking to meet the threat from Sadam Hussein towards Kuwait.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We responded rapidly to the threat from Saddam Hussein by deploying HMS Cornwall and HMS Cardiff, six additional Tornado GRI aircraft and the Spearhead battalion group to the region.

The UN Security Council unanimously passed SCR 949 on 15 October which demanded the complete withdrawal of all Iraqi military units. Iraq should not redeploy troops or enhance its military capacity in southern Iraq. Iraq should be in no doubt of our resolve.

European Union

Mr. Hoon: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he considers it appropriate at this stage to rule out the use of a referendum to determine future questions affecting the terms of the United Kingdom's membership of the European Union.

Mr. David Davis: We have not ruled out a referendum, but my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister has made it clear that he is not in general in favour of referendums in our parliamentary democracy.

Sir Roger Moate: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on progress towards enlargement of the European Community.

Mr. David Davis: The European Union signed a treaty of accession with four EFTA states on 24 June this year. The people of Austria and Finland have voted in favour of joining: provided that the referendums in Sweden on 13 November and in Norway on 28 November are also positive, and that remaining parliamentary procedures in those countries are satisfactorily completed, all four will accede on 1 January 1995. On further European Union enlargement, the Copenhagen European Council in June 1993 agreed that the associated countries of central and eastern Europe that so wish will join as soon as they are able to assume the obligations of membership by satisfying the economic and political conditions required. The Corfu European Council in June 1994 agreed that the next phase of enlargement would involve Cyprus and Malta.

Former Soviet Union Countries

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on United Kingdom relations with former Soviet Union countries.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The United Kingdom enjoys good bilateral relations with all the countries which gained independence following the break-up of the Soviet Union. The United Kingdom continues to support political and economic reform in those countries as the best way to achieve stability and prosperity in the region.

UK Foreign Policy (Far East)

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he next intends to visit the far east to discuss the implications of United Kingdom foreign policy.

Mr. Goodlad: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary visited Japan, Hong Kong, Thailand and Vietnam in September. He has no immediate plans to visit the region again.

Kashmir

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to meet with groups in the United Kingdom campaigning for a resolution to the problems of Indian-held Kashmir.

Mr. Baldry: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary has no current plans to meet such groups.

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the future of Kashmir.

Mr. Baldry: We believe that the best way forward on Kashmir should involve simultaneous progress on dialogue between India and Pakistan as provided for under the 1972 Simla agreement; an improvement in human rights in Kashmir and a genuine political process there; and a clear cessation of external support for violence in Kashmir.

Nuclear Non-proliferation Treaty

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what initiatives he has promoted to strengthen the nuclear non-proliferation treaty in advance of its 1995 review and renewal conference.

Mr. David Davis: We are working hard for the indefinite and unconditional extension in unamended form of the nuclear non-proliferation treaty in 1995. We believe such an extension will send a clear message to would-be proliferators of the international community's resolve to prevent any proliferation of nuclear weapons. We are actively seeking with our European Union partners the universality of the treaty, which, with 165 members, is the most widely adhered to arms control agreement in history. We support work underway in the International Atomic Energy Agency to strengthen the agency's safeguards system which is key to the successful implementation of the treaty.

Taiwan

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement about Her Majesty Government's relationship with Taiwan.

Mr. Goodlad: Although the United Kingdom has no diplomatic relations with Taiwan, we attach great importance to our commercial, cultural and educational links. United Kingdom exports for the period January to August 1994 were £448 million, an increase of over 13 per cent. compared with the same period in 1993. The British trade and cultural office in Taipei is being reinforced with additional staff to develop these links.

Middle East

Mr. Ernie Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on progress in the middle east peace process.

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the peace process in the middle east.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We fully support the middle east peace process and welcome the peace treaty between Israel and Jordan, recent signs of progress on the Syrian track and continuing negotiations between Israel and the Palestinians.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is his assessment of the likely impact of the closure of the Gaza strip and the west bank on the middle east peace process; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Closure of the Gaza strip and west bank has a serious effect on the economy of the occupied territories. It is estimated that more than 60,000 Palestinians go to work in Israel from the occupied territories, and that about one third of the gross product of the territories comes from the wages of Palestinians working in Israel. We are pleased to hear that the closure was being lifted gradually from 1 November.

Hong Kong

Mr. Denis MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he is taking to bring trade union law in Hong Kong into line with International Labour Office conventions.

Mr. Goodlad: Trade union law in Hong Kong is already broadly in line with the standards specified in international labour conventions. For example, the five ILCs relevant to trade unions which have been ratified by the United Kingdom have been applied to, and implemented in, Hong Kong, mostly without modification. The Hong Kong Government review trade union law regularly to keep it in line with international standards.

China

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he next expects to hold discussions with the People's Republic of China.

Mr. Goodlad: My right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary met the Chinese Foreign Minister in the margins of the United Nations General Assembly last month. He has no plans to do so again in the immediate future.

Ganges and Bramaputra Rivers

Mr. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with India and Bangladesh about their dispute about the water from the Ganges and Bramaputra rivers.

Mr. Baldry: None. This situation can be resolved only through bilateral negotiations between the Indian and Bangladeshi Governments. I hope that both sides can work towards an agreement soon.

Angola

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress is being made in the Angolan peace talks.

Mr. Baldry: The Angolan Government and Unita initialled a peace agreement in Lusaka on 31 October. The next step is for the two sides to hold talks on military issues, including a ceasefire. After these have been concluded, the parties are then expected to sign the agreement.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Grocott: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the average cost to his Department of answering (a) a written and (b) an oral parliamentary question.

Mr. Baldry: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer given by my right hon. Friend the then Chief Secretary to the Treasury on 30 November 1993, Official Report, column 391.

Bombing (Tel Aviv)

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with the Israeli Government concerning their decision to seal off the Gaza strip and west bank in response to the Tel Aviv bombing; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We raised with the Israeli Government the closure of the west bank and Gaza strip. We are pleased to hear that the closure is being lifted gradually from 1 November.

North Korea

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what consultations or communications he had from the United States Secretary of State prior to the agreement with North Korea over its nuclear programme; and what assistance or opportunities are available to Her Majesty's Government or British companies to meet the aims of the agreement.

Mr. David Davis: We have been in frequent contact with the United States at both ministerial and official level throughout the crisis over North Korea's nuclear programme. We have welcomed the framework agreement signed by the United States and North Korea on 21 October. As part of that agreement, the United States has undertaken to put together an international consortium, the Korean Energy Development Organisation, to provide North Korea with two light water reactors and to help it meet its energy needs while those reactors are under construction. We have told the Americans that we are prepared to offer technical advice to KEDO, but that no United Kingdom funds will be available. We shall, of course, facilitate the involvement of any United Kingdom companies that wish to bid for any part of the reactor project business. We understand that South Korea and Japan will play a central role in the financing and construction of the reactors.

School Fees

Mr. Grocott: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth affairs how many members of his Department are entitled to have school fees paid from public funds; what is the total current cost; and which schools receive the payments.

Mr. Goodlad: All Foreign and Commonwealth Office staff serving overseas, or expecting to serve overseas again after no more than five years in the United Kingdom, are entitled to boarding school allowance. A total of 726 diplomatic service and Overseas Development Administration staff currently receive the allowance, at a total cost of £8,690,277 in 1993–94. A list of the schools receiving payments is given below.

Officers whose children accompany them overseas are entitled to educate them at public expense where no suitable free schooling is available. Details of the number of officers receiving this local allowance or of the schools involved are not available. The total cost in respect of diplomatic service officers in 1993–94 is £2,310,477. There are not comparable figures for the ODA.

Indonesia

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what restrictions he places on the type of arms that could be sold to Indonesia; and if he will join the embargo on small arms sales to Indonesia.

Mr. Goodlad: The export to any destination of arms and other goods listed in the Export of Goods (Control) Order 1994 is prohibited without a licence issued by my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade. All applications for export licences for defence equipment are considered carefully on a case by case basis in the light of established criteria. In the case of Indonesia, we would not, for example, licence for export equipment likely to be used for internal repression. There is no United Nations or European Union embargo on arms sales to Indonesia.

British Embassies

Mr. Grocott: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the total annual running cost of the British embassy (a) in Paris, (b) in Cairo and (c) in Luanda.

Mr. Goodlad: The total annual running costs of the British embassies (a) in Paris, (b) in Cairo and, (c) in Luanda are £16·7 million, £3·3 million, and £1·5 million respectively.

International Atomic Energy Agency

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 21 October, Official Report, column 382, if he will reconsider his refusal to release the names of the British suppliers of technology to the Iraqi nuclear programme listed in the International Atomic Energy Agency report; and what is his response to the statement by the director-general of the IAEA before the Foreign Affairs Select Committee on 26 October regarding the release of such information.

Mr. David Davis: No. I have nothing to add to my reply of 21 October 1994, Official Report, column 382.

Secret Intelligence Service

Mr. Allason: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many compulsory redundancies have been made in the Secret Intelligence Service during the past 12 months.

Mr. Hurd: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister gave on 14 July 1994, Official Report, column 711-12. We do not intend to give detailed information on the staffing of the individual security and intelligence agencies.

Mr. Ib Riis

Mr. Allason: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what emergency support has been given to Mr. Ib Riis.

Mr. Hurd: Mr. Ib Riis wrote to me on 10 June. He wrote to my hon. Friend and others at the same time. In late June he was told that officials were looking at his case. In late September he was asked to submit a claim for financial assistance. He responded in October and his claim is now being considered.

EU Directives

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many directives of the European Union have not in whole or part yet been incorporated into law in the United Kingdom.

Mr. David Davis: The European Commission's Eleventh Annual Report on Monitoring the Application of Community Law (1993) document reference 6697/94, COM (94) 500 Final, records that the UK had by 31 December 1993 notified the Commission of implementing measures in respect of 1,060 directives out of a total of 1,148 directives applicable on that date. This record was bettered only by the Netherlands and Denmark. The Commission report is available in the Library.

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what timetable exists setting out dates for the incorporation into United Kingdom law of European Union directives which remain outstanding.

Mr. David Davis: Separate deadlines for implementation are specified in each directive which is required to be transposed into national law. In some cases a directive will specify a number of deadlines, each of which is applicable to different provisions within the directive.

European Defence

Mr. Duncan Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if his speech to the Franco-British Council on Monday 24 October represents Government policy.

Mr. Hurd: It does. Because of misleading press reports, I have placed a copy in the Library.

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, following his speech of 24 October, what is Government policy on earmarking forces for a nascent European army; what options he is considering for an independent European defence structure outside NATO; and what consideration he has given to making the Western European Union a formal fourth pillar of the EU.

Mr. David Davis: There is no question of a European army. As agreed at Maastricht, the Western European Union is being developed as the defence component of the European Union and as the means to strengthen the European pillar of the Atlantic alliance. WEU has no standing forces of its own, but relies on NATO and other national forces, which can be made available on an ad hoc basis for WEU operations.

Hospitality Fund

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 24 October, Official Report, column 440, how much of the wine purchased on the advice of the Government hospitality fund advisory committee for the purchase of wine comes from any of the committee members' companies.

Mr. Goodlad: Members of the Government advisory committee for the purchase of wine recommend wines as being suitable for use as a consequence of "blind" tastings when they are unaware of the provenance of the wine being assessed. Nor are members involved in decisions on purchasing which are the responsibility of officials of the fund.

One member of the committee has consultancy status with one company from which 6 per cent. of wines purchased in 1993–1994 were supplied.

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 24 October, Official Report column 440, how the wine purchased by the Government hospitality fund advisory committee for the purchase of wine is used.

Mr. Goodlad: The wines purchased on the recommendation of the Government hospitality advisory committee for the purchase of wine are used only at functions which GHF provides for Ministers when giving official hospitality on behalf of Her Majesty's Government.

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 24 October, Official Report, column 440, what has been the annual cost of wine purchases undertaken by the Government hospitality fund advisory committee for the purchase of wine in each of the last five years.

Mr. Goodlad: The Government hospitality fund advisory committee for the purchase of wine has purchased no wine; it is involved only in recommending suitable wines for use by the fund.

Decisions on quantities needed and actual purchases are the responsibility of officials of the fund itself.

Purchases of wine by officials of the Government hospitality fund for the past five years are as follows;

1990–1991 — £132,926

Bananas

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what support the United Kingdom has given the Windward Islands over the export of bananas to the EC.

Mr. David Davis: The United Kingdom strongly supports the European Community banana regulation, which offers Windward Islands producers preferential access to the single market. We have support a special Community aid scheme for African, Caribbean and Pacific banana-producing states. We have also given bilateral and regional assistance to the Windward Islands banana industry. We provided emergency assistance in the wake of tropical storm Debbie and are supporting special EC measures to protect the Windwards' marketing structure.

Gibraltar

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will clarify Her Majesty's governments's policy over the 1985 Moran proposals on the future of Gibraltar following recent Spanish statements; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hurd: We told the Spanish Government at the last Brussels process meeting in March 1993 that we could not accept the proposals put to Sir Geoffrey Howe by Mr. Moran in 1985,—the "Moran Proposals"—as a basis for talks because of their precondition that sovereignty would be transferred. That position has not changed.

Our commitment to the people of Gibraltar is clearly set out in the preamble to the 1969 constitution. We will never enter into arrangements under which the people of Gibraltar would pass under the sovereignty of another state against their freely and democratically expressed wishes.

Ministerial Travel

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on how many occasions in the past year the spouse of a Minister in his Department has travelled abroad at public expense to accompany a Minister on public duties,and what has been the total cost to public funds; and on how many occasions such travel has been undertaken at own cost.

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 26 October 1994]: Between October 1993 and October 1994 Ministers in the Foreign and Commonwealth Office travelled abroad accompanied by their spouses at public expense on 13 occasions. The cost to public funds was £27,338. On each occasion the guidelines in "Questions of Procedure for Ministers" were followed and accord with departmental practice which has existed since at least 1955.

There have been no occasions when such travel was undertaken at own cost.

TREASURY

Pension Schemes

Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement about the tax treatment of small self-administered pension schemes which breach the conditions on which they receive approval for tax purposes.

Sir George Young: The tax approval system gives pension schemes very favourable tax treatment if certain conditions are met concerning the amount, timing and form of the benefits to be paid. The purpose of the tax reliefs is to encourage the provision of pensions to employees during their retirement.

Arrangements are now being encountered under which the trustees of some small self-administered occupational pension schemes have exploited the tax approval system. These arrangements involve initially taking advantage of the tax reliefs but then engineering loss of tax approval when access to the accumulated funds, in circumstances not allowed by the tax approval conditions, is desired by the scheme members or the sponsoring employer. An example is where the scheme wishes to lend all or a large part of its funds to the sponsoring employer.

The tax approval system is not intended to be used in this way. Arrangements of this kind undermine the pensions purpose for which the tax reliefs are given. Where a pension scheme wishes to take advantage of those reliefs it must accept all the conditions on which approval is granted.

In order to discourage the misuse of the tax approval system in this way a special 40 per cent. tax charge will be levied on the value of funds held by these schemes at the time tax approval is withdrawn. The new tax charge will apply where tax approval ceases on or after today. Further details are given in an Inland Revenue press release published today.

Family Incomes

Mr. Betts: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will update the answer to the hon. Member for Glasgow, Garscadden (Mr. Dewar) of 3 November 1993, Official Report, column 257, on the number of families with children with taxable incomes below the income tax threshold.

Sir George Young: It is estimated that in 1994–95, 1·9 million single parents and married couples with children have no income tax liability.

Tax Statistics

Mr. Betts: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list for each year since 1979 the total tax yield from individual taxpayers liable for capital transfer tax, capital gains tax and inheritance tax; and if he will give for each year since 1989–90 the number of individual taxpayers liable for capital gains tax by their highest marginal rate of tax.

Sir George Young: The available information on net receipts each year since 1979–80 from capital gains tax, capital transfer tax and inheritance tax is given in the table. Separate figures on capital gains tax receipts for individuals and trusts are not available but, in terms of tax liabilities, individuals account for between 83 per cent. and 90 per cent. of the total.

[4] The breakdown of receipts between 1980–81 and 1981–82 was estimated as they were affected by industrial action between March 1981 and July 1981.

The breakdown of capital gains taxpayers given in the table includes a separate column for trusts in order to reconcile with published figures on taxpayer numbers.

Mr. Betts: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list for each year since 1979 (a) the total income, both earned and unearned, (b) total national insurance contributions paid and (c) total income tax paid by (i) the top 1 per cent., (ii) the top 5 per cent., (iii) the top 10 per cent., (iv) the bottom 50 per cent. and (v) all taxpayers.

Sir George Young: Readily available estimates based on the survey of personal incomes are in the tables. For 1978–79 and 1989–90, married couples are counted as one taxpayer and their incomes are combined. Following the introduction of independent taxation, for 1990–91 onwards, husbands and wives are counted separately. The estimates of total income relate to income subject to income tax and exclude non-taxable income such as certain social security benefits.

Mr. Betts: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what would be the effect on the number of taxpayers in the financial year 1995–96 and on the number of higher rate taxpayers of (a) indexation, (b) raising the main personal allowances by 5 per cent. more than indexation and (c) raising personal allowances by 10 per cent. more than indexation, giving figures separately for each main allowance and a total for main allowances.

Sir George Young: Estimates based on statutory indexation of 2·2 per cent. in line with the September retail prices index and income levels projected to 1995–96 levels using the summer economic forecast are given in the table. The levels of the married couple's allowance and linked allowances in 1995–96 were set in the Finance Act 1994 and will therefore not be subject to the statutory indexation rules.

Estimated number of income taxpayers 1995-96	Total millions	Of which higher rate taxpayers
a) Indexation	26·5	2·6
b) Increasing personal allowance for those aged under 65 by 5 per cent. more than indexation	26·2	2·5

Increasing all personal allowances by 5 per cent. more than indexation	26·1	2·5
c) Increasing personal allowance for those aged under 65 by 10 per cent. more than indexation	26·0	2·5
Increasing personal allowance for those aged 65 or over by 10 per cent. more than indexation	26·2	2·6
Increasing all personal allowances by 10 per cent more than indexation	25·7	2·5

Mr. Betts: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the direct revenue yield in a full year at 1994–95 levels of income from restricting (a) personal allowances, (b) relief from pension contributions and (c) other reliefs to relief at 25p and (d) 20p giving in each case the numbers of people affected.

Sir George Young: Estimated full-year yields at 1994–95 income levels based on a projection of the 1992–93 survey of personal incomes and other survey data are given in the table. The figures do not take account of any behavioural effects which might result from the introduction of such changes, and show the yield from restructuring each allowance of relief separately. If two or more were restricted the total yield would be greater than the sum of individual figures.

	Restriction to

(b) Relief for pension contributions	700	2·0	1,350	11·5
(c) Other reliefs	140	0·7	[1]n/a	n/a

[1] Information on reliefs given at source is not available from the Survey of Personal Incomes so it is not possible to estimate the effect of restricting other reliefs to 20 per cent.

Mr. Betts: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will update his answer to the hon. Member for Glasgow, Garscadden (Mr. Dewar) of 5 November 1993, Official Report, column 549 on mortgage tax relief, giving estimates for 1995–96 and for a full year.

Sir George Young: Estimates for 1995–96 are given in the table. The figures are based on the conventional assumption of no changes in interest rates from current levels and allow for tax relief at 15 per cent. as set in the Finance Act 1994. They exclude any behavioural effects which might result.

20,000	(700)

Mr. Betts: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate for 1993–94 the number of self-employed who will pay no income tax, giving figures separately for those with gross incomes (a) under £5,000 a year, (b) between £5,000 and £10,000 a year, (c) between £10,000 and £15,000 a year, (d) between £15,000 and £20,000 a year and (e) over £20,000 a year.

Sir George Young: There are about 770,000 self-employed with no income tax liability in 1993–94. Of these, 670,000 have gross income of under £5,000 and 100,000 have gross income of over £5,000.

The estimates are based on the projection of the latest annual survey of personal incomes and are provisional. The number with gross income above £5,000 is too small to allow any separate breakdown.

Mr. Betts: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list for 1995–96 or the latest year available an estimate of the yield and the number of taxpayers affected by restricting the capital gains tax allowance to relief at the (a) 25 pence rate and (b) 20 pence rate.

Sir George Young: Under current rules net chargeable gains below the capital gains tax annual exempt amount are totally exempt from tax. The effects of restricting this relief at the 25 per cent. and 20 per cent. rates are given in the table below based on forecast 1994–95 liabilities. The estimates assume the restriction would only affect individuals with gains above the annual exempt amount and do not allow for any consequential change in their behaviour.

	Number of taxpayers affected	Capital gains tax yield (£ million)
Restricting the relief to:
(a) 25 per cent rate	45,000	35
(b) 20 per cent.	75,000	60

Mr. Betts: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much tax was remitted or written off as irrecoverable in 1993; and how much of this was pay-as-you-earn contributions.

Sir George Young: In 1993, £1·58 billion was written off as irrecoverable by the Inland Revenue and £400 million of this was pay-as-you-earn contributions.

Pig-producing Industry

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will review the taxation and capital depreciation allowances available to the British pig producing industry between now and 1 January 1999 when the rules relating to stall and tether regulations change;

(2) if he will consider allowing pig producers to carry back losses over a three-year period; if he will change the tax regulations relating to buildings used by pig producers with a design life of less than 10 years so that they are regarded as plant and machinery and attract annual depreciation rates of 25 per cent.; if he will allow pig producers to defer claiming allowances until the following year; and if he will set full-year capital allowances for pig producers at 100 per cent. before the rules relating to stall and tether regulations change in January 1999.

Sir George Young: The hon. Member would not expect me to make a statement on taxation matters at this time of year.

Fraud

Mr. Betts: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will take steps to obtain an estimate of the percentage of fraud involving transactions between the United Kingdom and offshore tax havens.

Sir George Young: There are no steps that can be taken to obtain a reliable estimate.

Mr. Betts: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many prosecutions were brought in each of the last five years as the result of tax fraud; and how many of these related to false accounts and income tax returns.

Sir George Young: I refer the hon. Member to the annual report of the board of Inland Revenue for 1993–94—appendix, table 6—copies of which were laid before Parliament on 5 October 1994.

Offshore Tax Havens

Mr. Betts: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the additional revenues obtained for the Treasury by the measures he has adopted to limit tax avoidance via trusts and offshore tax havens since 1992.

Sir George Young: The comprehensive system for the taxation of capital gains on those setting up, and receiving benefits from, offshore trusts which was introduced in 1992 prevented an estimated revenue loss of up to £100 million in a full year. In addition, changes introduced in 1993 and 1994 to the legislation for controlled foreign companies and to the treatment of interest payments within multinational groups were expected to increase Exchequer yield by 200 million in a full year.

Public Bodies

Dr. Wright: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many Departments have produced rules of conduct for members of non-departmental public bodies sponsored by those Departments as instructed in "Non-Departmental Bodies: A Guide for Departments"; and if he will arrange for copies to be placed in the Library.

Mr. Nelson: This section of the guide has now been superseded. In June the Treasury circulated to sponsor Departments a model code of best practice for board members of public bodies. Copies were placed in the Library of the House of Commons in early July. Sponsor departments are now discussing with executive NDPBs how they may adapt the Treasury code to suit their particular circumstances or whether they should adopt a different code such as the Cadbury code.

European Expenditure

Sir John Stanley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been (a) in each year since 1979 and (b) over the whole period since 1979 the percentage increase in spending by the European Community; and what was the average percentage increase in inflation in the Community as a whole in each year since 1979 and over the whole period since 1979.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The percentage increase in spending by the European Community in each year since 1979 is as follows:

The average percentage increase in inflation in the Community as a whole in each year since 1979 was as follows:

1994	3·3
1993	3·3
1992	4·3
1991	5·1
1990	5·7

The average percentage increase in inflation in the Community as a whole over the whole period since 1979 was 6·6 per cent.

EC Accounting Systems

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the Government's progress in persuading the institutions of the EC to move to accruals and resource-based accounting systems.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The Government are convinced of the advantages of resource accounting and budgeting for the United Kingdom public sector, along the lines of the outline proposals published in the Green Paper on resource accounting and budgeting, Cm 2626. We believe that the principles of resource accounting might usefully be applied to the finances of other institutions outside the United Kingdom, such as those of the European Community. The Government will be considering this issue further when the United Kingdom proposals have been worked out in more detail.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to apply his policy on accounting standards for stand-alone operating units within the public sector to the introduction of similar standards for units of the Commission of the European Communities, including agencies operated by Her Majesty's Government.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The proposals in the Green Paper on resource accounting and budgeting, Cm 2626, will apply both to the centre of departments and to their agencies, although in many cases the latter are already putting the principles of resource accounting into practice.

Mortgages

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what action he has taken with his colleagues to assist borrowers from building societies to avoid repossessions.

Mr. Nelson: On 19 December 1991, the then Chancellor announced a number of measures designed to reduce substantially the level of mortgage repossessions. The Government agreed to make mortgage payments in income support direct to lenders, and raised the stamp duty threshold from £30,000 to £250,000 for eight months, to stimulate the housing market. The lenders confirmed that they would not seek to take possession where mortgage interest payments were covered by income support; or where a borrower had suffered a sharp fall in income but was continuing to make reasonable, regular payments. They also agreed to provide counselling for borrowers in difficulties and to examine the possibility of setting up formal mortgage rescue schemes.

Together, these steps have contributed to a significant fall in repossessions. In the second half of 1991, 38,930 properties were repossessed. In the first half of 1994, the figure was down to 25,020, a reduction of 35·7 per cent.

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what discussions he or his colleagues have had with building societies to explore ways to help borrowers and to reduce the number of defaults on mortgage repayments.

Mr. Nelson: Treasury Ministers meet representatives of building societies from time to time to discuss a wide range of issues.

Commemorative Coins

Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans Her Majesty's Government has to issue new commemorative coins.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: Her Majesty the Queen has been graciously pleased to approve my recommendation that a £5 coin be issued featuring a special commemorative design to commemorate Her Majesty's 70th birthday. Her Majesty The Queen has also been pleased to approve a proposal that a £2 coin be issued to commemorate the European Football Championship which will be held in England during 1996. It is not intended that these coins should go into general circulation although the coins will be available at most banks and post offices at face value and special versions will be issued in precious and base metal.

NHS Trusts

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the NHS trusts which deposit funds with him; and what changes there have been in the arrangements for the deposit of funds in each of the last two years.

Mr. Aitken: There are 25 NHS trusts that make use of the National Loans Fund temporary deposit facility, which requires a minimum deposit of £1 million. Previously deposits had to be in units of £1 million, but the arrangements were changed on 1 April 1993 to permit deposits above the minimum to be made in multiples of £1,000. All 507 NHS trusts hold bank accounts at the Paymaster Agency, on which interest is also payable. The 25 trusts that use the NLF temporary deposit facility are listed as follows:

Allington Trust
Chesterfield and North Derbyshire Royal Hospital Trust
East Gloucestershire Trust
East Hertfordshire Trust
East and Midlothian Trust
Guild Community Healthcare Trust
Gloucestershire Royal Trust
Hastings and Rother Trust
King's Lynn and Wisbech Hospital Trust
Milton Keynes Community Trust

Pinderfields Hospitals Trust
Pontefract Hospitals Trust

The Mental Health Service of Salford Trust
South Buckinghamshire Trust
Stoke Mandeville Hospital Trust

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Grocott: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the average cost to his Department of answering (a) a written and (b) an oral parliamentary question.

Mr. Nelson: The average cost, across all Departments, of preparing an answer was assessed as £97 for a written question and £225 for an oral question in November 1993. Up-to-date costings should be available shortly.

Ministerial Travel

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer on how many occasions in the past year the spouse of a Minister in his Department has travelled abroad at public expense to accompany a Minister on public duties, and what has been the total cost to public funds; and on how many occasions such travel has been undertaken at own cost.

Mr. Nelson [holding answer 26 October 1994]: There have been eight occasions since September 1993 where a Minister's spouse has accompanied the Minister, of these three have been at public expense at a total cost of £1,544.

Public Appointments

Dr. Wright: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many public appointments (a) he is responsible for making and (b) require his approval including those not listed in "Public Bodies"; and if he will give this figure in terms of (i) appointments to executive bodies, (ii) appointments to advisory bodies and (iii) other appointments.

Mr. Nelson [holding answer 27 October 1994]: My right hon. and learned Friend has some responsibility for making or approving the following appointments:

Number of Appointments	Executive Bodies	Advisory bodies	Other Appointments
Listed in Public Bodies 1993 (including Royal Mint)	—	[1]57	40
Not listed in Public Bodies[2]	[3]27	[4]56	[5]146

Notes:

[1] Of these, the 44 Pay Review Body appointments require the Chancellor's approval but the Prime Minister is responsible for appointing members; the 13 appointments to the Royal Mint Advisory Committee (listed separately in Public Bodies 1993) are Crown appointments made on the Chancellor's advice;

[2] These appointments relate to the bodies listed in the answer given response to on 3 March 1994 (official report, column 879);

[3] Of these, the 12 appointments to the Public Works Loan Board are Crown appointments on the recommendation of the Prime Minister who is in turn advised by the Chancellor of the Exchequer;

Reception

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the nature of the reception held on 28 June 1993 at 11 Downing street; and what was the cost.

Mr. Nelson [holding answer 31 October 1994]: No reception was held at No. 11 on 28 June 1993.

DEFENCE

Quangos

Mr. Grocott: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which former hon. Members of this House have been appointed since 1988 by his Department to quasi-autonomous non-governmental organisations; and if he will list, in each case, the title of the post, the salary, the duration of the appointment, and the party which each represented as an hon. Member.

Mr. Soames: Former membership of the House of Commons is not a relevant qualification for appointment and is not centrally recorded. We are aware of only one example. Sir Antony Buck QC, the then Member for Colchester, North, served on the independent board of visitors for the military corrective training centre, Colchester from 1980 to 1992. At the date he stood down as a Member of Parliament and relinquished his appointment. Appointments are reviewed every three years and Sir Antony's last reappointment was in 1989. The post was as a member of the board and was not salaried.

Eurocorps

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has for Britain to join Eurocorps.

Mr. Soames: There are no plans for Britain to join the Eurocorps, although British forces are in principle available to the Western European Union.

Western European Union

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what proposals he has for upgrading the defence-related activities of the Western European Union.

Mr. Soames: We remain committed to developing the Western European Union as the means to strengthen the European pillar of the NATO alliance and as the defence component of the European Union. We shall continue to contribute to the development of its operational planning, and to other aspects of its work. As agreed at the NATO summit last January, this process will include the development of separable but not separate capabilities which could respond to European requirements and contribute to alliance security.

Puma

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 5 July, Official Report, columns 173–74, when the royal naval aircraft yard Fleetlands bid for the Puma NVG contract; if the bid was the lowest; if other contenders were invited to resubmit their tenders; and if the final bid accepted was lower than that for Fleetlands.

Mr. Freeman: The royal naval aircraft yard Fleetlands submitted a budgetary estimate for the Puma NVG modification which contained a number of qualifications and exclusions particularly relating to the timeliness of delivery of modified aircraft to the concurrent firm price Puma navigation update programme. It was decided that placing the work with Fleetlands or with any organisation other than the PNU prime contractor would have exposed the Department to considerable financial risk arising from late delivery to the Puma aircraft. For this reason the NVG modification was not offered for open competition. The work, including acceptance of all risks arising from NVG modification delays, was awarded at higher cost to the PNU prime contractor under single tender arrangements and priced under the Departments stringent "no acceptable price no contract" procedure.

Mr. Meale: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the total income form licences to hunt on Ministry of Defence land in 1992, 1993 and to date for 1994; when the costs of such licences were reviewed; and whether such licences are open for public tender.

Mr. Soames: Total receipts from annual hunting licences were £729·85 for 1991–92, £292·80 for 1992–93 and £507·30 for 1993–94. The charge for individual licences are reviewed at different times so no specific date can be given for reviews of licence fees. The licences are granted on application and are not open to public tender.

Mr. Meale: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many licences to hunt on Ministry of Defence land were issued in 1992, 1993 and to date in 1994 for which there was no charge; to which hunts or bodies the licences were issued; and which area of land were involved.

Mr. Soames: The numbers of licences to hunt on MOD land issued in 1992, 1993 and to date in 1994 for which there was no charge were 10, 10 and seven respectively. The hunts or bodies to which these licences were issued and the areas are as follows:

Birds and Game

Mr. Meale: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the total income from licences to shoot birds and game on Ministry of Defence land in 1992, 1993 and 1994; what are the annual charges for each licence; and if these are open for public tender.

Mr. Soames: The total income from licences to shoot birds and game on my Department's land in 1992, 1993 and 1994 was £12,012·61, £9,582·84 and£15,349·05 respectively. The annual fees for individual licences are commercial in confidence. Licences to shoot birds and game are not generally let by public tender.

Mr. Meale: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many hares have been captured on Ministry of Defence land at Foulness in each of the past three years; what methods of capture have been employed; to which locations the hares have been transported; which expert bodies have been utilised to supervise the capture, transportation and release of such hares and which organisations were consulted for advice; what were the costs of this exercise in 1993 and 1994 and who was responsible for the costs; and what costs were incurred by the Ministry of Defence.

Mr. Soames: Under the provisions of the Ground Game Act 1880, tenant farmers on Foulness Island have the absolute right to take ground game. This is a private matter and my Department does not maintain records relating to the capture of game.

Fox Hunting

Mr. Meale: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list details and dates of when the Household Cavalry participated in fox hunting; with which hunts; and on how many occasions since February 1993.

Mr. Meale: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which mounted regiments have participated in fox hunting in 1993 and 1994.

Mr. Soames: Officers and soldiers of the Household Cavalry Mounted Regiment and the King's Troop Royal Horse Artillery have taken part in fox hunts during 1993 and 1994. No additional costs to public funds were incurred as a result of this activity.

UN Convention on Inhumane Weapons

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will ratify the 1980–81 United Nations convention on inhumane weapons.

Mr. Soames: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Liverpool, Mossley Hill (Mr. Alton) by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister on 31 October, Official Report column 911.

RAF Support Management Group

Mr. Robert Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many personnel in (a) mobile and (b) non-mobile grades employed at the RAF support management group in Harrogate have moved or have agreed to move to RAF Wyton.

Mr. Freeman: As at 1 November 1994, some 294 personnel in mobile grades and 80 personnel in non-mobile grades have moved or agreed to move to HQ RAF Logistics Command at RAF Wyton and RAF Brampton.

Market Testing

Mr. Robert Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans are being drawn up for market testing in logistical support for each of the armed services.

Mr. Freeman: The defence cost study "Front Line First" has had a significant effect upon the size and shape of the Department's competing for quality initiative. The programme has been reviewed and we are currently finalising a much expanded version which will include a broad range of support activity. The 1994–95 programme is expected to cover activities valued at some £330 million. Details of individual market tests are published in the Cabinet Office's market testing bulletin.

RAF Runways

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many airfields and how many runways are available to the Royal Air Force in each region of the United Kingdom; and how many of those runways will be lost to the service during the next five years.

Mr. Soames: Details of all airfields in the United Kingdom available to the RAF, including the number of runways at each location, can be found in the RAF flight information publication—En Route Supplement British Isles and North Atlantic—a copy of which has been placed in the Library of the House. Over the next five years there is planned to be a reduction of eight in the number of runways operated by my Department.

RAF Greenham Common

Mr. Rendel : To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what evidence he has of nuclear contamination at the former airbase, RAF Greenham Common.

Mr. Soames: There is no evidence that RAF Greenham Common contains any nuclear contamination attributable to its former military use. The Defence Radiological Protection Service recently undertook an environmental radioactivity survey of the site. The levels of radioactivity present were similar to those prevailing throughout the United Kingdom.

European Defence

Mr. Duncan Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if it is his policy to (a) pool and (b) merge the British Army with French and other European Union armies, leading to the eventual formation of a European army.

Mr. Soames: No.

Landing Platform Helicopter

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for defence what changes there have been in the specification of the landing platform helicopter and in the contract price.

Mr. Freeman: In line with the assurances given to the Public Accounts Committee, my Department controls specification changes very carefully. Only a small number of essential changes to the specification have been agreed. These represent an additional cost of less than one half of 1 per cent. of the contract value.

VSEL

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his policy in relation to the future ownership of VSEL, with particular reference to competition for future supply to the Navy.

Mr. Freeman: My Department will, in the usual way, be giving its views to the regulatory authorities on the competition and any other relevant aspects of the possible takeover of VSEL. These views are confidential.

Defence Contracts

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what were (a) the outturn prices, (b) the estimated prices at the time of Ministry of Defence approval, (c) the actual time and (d) the estimated time to completion of defence projects valued at over £50 million undertaken for the Ministry of Defence since 1979 by GEC, where GEC was the prime contractor or was a member of a consortium with joint and several liability.

Mr. Freeman: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my reply in the Library.

Military Survey Defence Agency

Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what key targets have been set for the director general of the Military Survey defence agency for the financial year 1994–95.

Mr. Soames: The Military Survey defence agency key targets for 1994–95 are:

1. To meet 100 per cent. of operational requirements for geographic support to the required standard and on time.

2. To achieve an operational evaluation (Opeval) status of "substantially effective" and to improve the Opeval concept by developing new Opeval criteria including two operational scenarios

3. To meet the agreed production programme, to the extent to which operational requirements allow, which is quantified as:

   a. Originate or revise 275 maps and charts equating to 10,610 work units.

   b. Produce 763 digital products equating to 2,506 work units.

   Note: One work unit equates to five man days of effort.

4. To achieve an efficiency target of at least 3.9 per cent.

5. To operate within ±3 per cent. of the £53,708,000 budget, subject to in-year management direction.

Although these targets are similar to those set last year, the way in which production targets have been set has been refined. The move to work units as the measure of performance recognises that no two products are the same with equal effort required.

The agency performed well against last year's targets although the increase in support to operations lead to some production targets not being fully met. A copy of the agency's annual report will be placed in the Library of the House shortly.

AWE Aldermaston

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to the oral statement of the Minister of State for Defence Procurement of 18 October, Official Report, column 240, when he expects AWE Aldermaston to obtain a safety licence.

Mr. Freeman [holding answer 1 November 1994]: Experience in the civil sector suggests that preparations for licensing, including the production of prescribed documentation for assessment by the nuclear installations inspectorate, takes some time. The picture in respect of the AWE will become clearer during the discussions with the regulatory bodies to which I referred during the defence debate on 18 October 1994, Official Report, column 240, and which are now in progress. I expect to be able to give an indication of the likely timescale before Easter next year.

HEALTH

Abortions

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if general practitioner fundholders can use their funds to purchase abortions for their patients.

Mr. Malone: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has recently announced that the fundholding scheme will be expanded from April 1996. Details are set out in an executive letter of 20 October 1994, a copy of which has been laid in the Library. In brief, there will be three new options: community fundholding, for those practices with a minimum list size of £3,000 patients; standard fundholding, an enlarged version of the current scheme, for which the list size requirement will be reduced to £5,000 patients; and total purchasing, where larger groups of practices will pilot the purchasing of all hospital and community health services. As part of this expansion, terminations of pregnancy will be included within standard fundholding from April 1996. Guidance will make it clear that, where a general practitioner has ethical objections to purchasing terminations of pregnancy, arrangements will be made for patients to have access to these services either through another GP fundholder or through services purchased by the district health authority.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many abortions were linked to rubella last year and 10 years ago.

Mr. Sackville: In 1982 in England and Wales there were 226 legal abortions associated with rubella, compared with only 12 in 1992—a reduction of 95 per cent.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information she has on the risk of developing breast cancer for women who have had abortions; and what assessment her Department has made of Canadian research on the links between abortion and breast cancer.

Mr. Sackville.: We have no information on such risks. We await the full findings of the Canadian research with interest.

Psychiatric Beds

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the national guidance to purchasers on levels for bed occupancy for acute beds and for psychiatric beds.

Mr. Sackville: We do not issue guidance on bed occupancy levels.

Supervision Registers

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many health authorities had set up supervision registers as at 1 October.

Mr. Bowis: Early reports indicate that supervision registers were in place in the large majority of health districts by 1 October. They were well on the way to being in place in most of the remainder. The national health service executive is taking action to ensure that the guidance HSG(94)5, on supervision registers is fully implemented in all health districts as soon as possible. Copies of the guidance are available in the Library.

Open House Hospice

Miss. Lestor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on what grounds the funding commitment for the Open House hospice in Manchester, for people with HIV and AIDS, was reduced in October 1993 from the figure announced in March 1993; and on what grounds no money for the hospice has yet been released by the North Western region health authority.

Mr. Sackville: The initial sum was approved in principle on the assumption that a full independent assessment of the need for palliative care across the region had been carried out, and that the need for an HIV specific hospice had been established. As this was not the case, a sum of £750,000 has been allocated to North Western region to carry out a thorough assessment of palliative care for all client groups in the region and to implement the report's recommendations.

My noble Friend the Under-Secretary of State will write in more detail to the hon. Member about this matter and a copy of her letter will be placed in the Library.

Day Nurseries

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress she has made in reviewing the system of regulation for day nurseries.

Mr. Bowis: The Department monitors the Children Act through the social services inspectorate. In January 1993 we issued a circular LAC(93)1 to clarify existing guidance on the registration of day care facilities, including nurseries. Copies of the circular are available in the Library.

Special Transitional Grant

Mr. Cann: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans there are to reflect the special needs of elderly people in respect of community care in the next year's special transitional grant for social service authorities.

Mr. Bowis: An announcement on next year's grant will be made in due course.

Burnley NHS Healthcare Trust

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will investigate and make public the circumstances at Burnley NHS Healthcare trust in which the chief executive and chairman each called for the other's resignation.

Mr. Sackville: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave the hon. Member for Burnley (Mr. Pike) on 1 November. The chief executive resigned on 28 October.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what qualities she took into account in deciding to appoint Mr. James Rawson as chairman of Burnley NHS Healthcare trust.

Mr. Sackville: Mr. Rawson was re-appointed as chairman of Burnley NHS Healthcare trust from 1 December 1993 following his performance as chairman of the trust between 1 December 1991 and 31 November 1993.

Growth Hormone

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what are the responsibilities of fundholding general practitioners for the payment of the cost of growth hormone treatment for their patients;

(2) if she will make a statement on the division of responsibilities for the prescribing of growth hormone treatment between the prescribing hospital and the patient's general practitioner.

Mr. Malone: As for all drug therapies, the responsibility for prescribing for a particular patient rests with the doctor who has clinical responsibility for that aspect of the patient's care. This applies irrespective of whether the general practitioner is fundholding or not. This is clearly set out in guidance to the NHS, EL(91)127, copies of which are available in the Library.

Hepatitis and Dysentery

Ms Gordon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what has been the percentage change in the number of cases of (a) hepatitis and (b) dysentery since the privatisation of the water authorities.

Mr. Sackville: The data provided are for notification—England and Wales—to the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys of dysentery and hepatitis A, the form of viral hepatitis most likely to be transmitted by water, between 1988 and 1993. The data for 1993 are provisional. These notifications may be made before the diagnosis is firmly established. Notifications are therefore subject to withdrawal or amendment.

Year	Dysentery	Per cent. change	Hepatitis A	Per cent. change
1988	3,692	—	3,190	—
1989	3,278	-11	5,278	+65
1990	2,756	-16	7,316	+39
1991	9,935	+260	7,430	+2
1992	16,960	+71	7,856	+6
1993	6,837	-60	4,457	-43

Dysentery and viral hepatitis both show a periodicity in their incidence with natural peaks and troughs every eight to 10 years. The most recent peaks in the annual incidence of dysentery were seen in 1984 and 1992 and the most recent peaks in the annual incidence of hepatitis A were seen in 1982 and 1992.

Ms Gordon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what study she has commissioned regarding any correlation between the number of dysentery cases and the price of water;

(2) what study she has commissioned into any correlation between the number of hepatitis cases and the price of water.

Mr. Sackville: None.

Road Traffic Accidents

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what has been the income received from the Road Traffic Act 1988 charges for treatment of road traffic accident victims in each region in each of the last five years for which figures have been kept.

Mr. Sackville: The information requested has been placed in the Library.

Asthma

Ms Gordon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many cases of asthma in children under five years were recorded in each year since 1979.

Mr. Sackville: Numbers of hospital in-patient cases of children suffering from asthma are available from hospital episode statistics for the years shown in the table. Figures for earlier years are not available.

Blood Transfusion Service

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what consideration is being given to donor convenience and the views of doctors and hospitals in the current review of the blood transfusion service.

Mr. Sackville: Donors' interests are a key feature in the national blood authority's proposals. Under the proposals, blood collection would be readily accessible to donors. Mobile teams would go out to donors in all areas whether the centres are amalgamated or not.

The national blood authority's proposals are the result of a strategic review which included the views of doctors and hospitals. The authority is consulting with hospitals locally and drawing up a detailed plan to cover all their requirements. Views have also been sought from various bodies representing the medical profession. The National Blood Authority is undertaking a national consultation on its proposals. The results will be carefully considered before decisions are made.

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much blood is currently held at the blood transfusion centre, Liverpool; what capacity it has for the storage of blood; and what capacity for storing blood exists in the hospitals served by the centre.

Mr. Sackville: The blood stock held at the Liverpool blood transfusion centre varies from day to day. The centre can comfortably hold between 3,500 and 4,000 units. Figures are not available centrally for blood storage capacity in the hospitals served by the centre. The proposals to reorganise the national blood service include improved blood stockholding units so that all hospitals, including those in Liverpool, have easy access to supplies.

Food Poisoning

Dr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what are the latest figures available for the current year for the number of reported cases of human salmonellosis in England and Wales.

Mr. Sackville: Data on salmonella infections in humans are published in the "Communicable Disease Report", copies of which are available in the Library.

There was a decrease of 2·8 per cent. in the figures recorded for January to September 1994 compared with the same period in 1993.

Dr. Strang: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the total number of food poisoning notifications to the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys for 1993 up the nearest available date to 7 October.

Mr. Sackville: Up to 7 October 1993 there were 56,428 notifications.

Figures for 1993 are provisional. These notifications may be made before the diagnosis is firmly established and are therefore subject to withdrawal or amendment.

Glaucoma

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many new patients with glaucoma were referred to out-patient departments for each year from 1985 until the latest for which current figures are available.

Mr. Sackville: This information is not collected by medical condition.

Camden and Islington Health Authority

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many fundholding general practitioner practices there are in Camden and Islington health authority area; what proportion of the lists they cover; and for what proportions of hospital admissions they are responsible.

Mr. Malone: There are two general practitioner fundholding practices in Camden and Islington serving 6 per cent. of the population. The information requested on the proportion of hospital admissions is not currently available.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussion she has had with the Camden and Islington health authority concerning its level of financial resources in the current financial year.

Mr. Sackville: None.

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action she is proposing to take to restore non-emergency health services to the people of Islington; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Sackville: This is a matter for the Camden and Islington health authority and the hon. Member may wish to contact the chairman, Mr. Roland Everington, for details.

Public Appointments

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the names of the members of chairs of (a) the NHS supplies authority and (b) the Bromley health authority on 1 April.

Mr. Malone [pursuant to his reply 21 April 1994, c. 668]: I regret that potentially misleading information was given in the previous reply concerning the membership of the National Health Service Supplies Authority. The reply stated that there is no statutory bar to the appointment of chairman and members of other health authorities to the NHS Supplies Authority. The reply omitted to state that the regulations governing NHS trusts do not allow individuals to be appointed to NHS trusts if they are members of the NHS Supplies Authority. One of those listed in the reply, Mr. Frederick Hoult, was chairman of the Freeman Group of Hospitals NHS trust, and has subsequently been found to have become technically disqualified from his trust appointment when he was appointed to the NHS Supplies Authority on 1 October 1991.

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list by name and position those chairs, members and non-executive directors of district health authorities, FHSA, NHS trusts, shadow NHS trusts and other NHS authorities which have dual appointments as chairs, members or non-executive directors of other district health authorities, FHSAs, NHS trusts, shadow NHS trusts and other NHS authorities.

Mr. Malone [pursuant to his reply 25 April 1994, c. 68–69]: I regret that potentially misleading information was provided in the previous reply. The reply included a list of dual national health service appointments which included five cases which have subsequently been found to be invalid. The reply also stated that appointees to other NHS bodies are permitted to be appointed as members of the NHS Supplies Authority and the Mental Health Act Commission. This was accurate in relation to some NHS bodies but did not reflect the position for NHS trusts, whose chairmen and non-executive directors may not be appointed to special health authorities.

Corrective action has been taken and 11 individuals whose appointments were invalid now hold only valid appointments. These individuals are listed as follows. The posts in which individuals continue are marked with an asterisk:

Mr. Frederick Hoult: Chairman of the Freeman Group of Hospitals NHS Trust, and member of the NHS Supplies Authority*.

Mrs. Phyllida Entwistle: Chairman of the Furness Hospitals NHS Trust*, and member of the Mental Health Act Commission.

Miss Georgina Linton: Non-executive director of Guy's and Lewisham Mental Health NHS Trust*, and member of the Mental Health Act Commission (Miss Linton resumed as a non-executive director of the Trust after her term at the Mental Health Act Commission ended on 31 October 1994).

Mrs. Lotte Mason: Non-executive director of Ravensbourne Priority Health NHS Trust, and member of the Mental Health Act Commission*.

Professor Elaine Murphy: Non-executive director of North West London Mental Health NHS Trust, and member of the Mental Health Act Commission*. (Professor Murphy will resume as non-executive director of the Trust after her present term at the Mental Health Act Commission ends on 30 November 1994).

Ms Rosalie Szasz: Non-executive member of Kensington, Chelsea and Westminster FHSA*, and member of the Dental Vocational Training Authority.

Mr. Brian Westbury: Non-executive member of Redbridge and Waltham Forest FHSA*, and member of the Dental Vocational Training Authority.

Mr. John Mooney: Non-executive member of Bury FHSA*, and member of the Dental Vocational Training Authority.

Mr. Julian Bedford: Non-executive member of North Yorkshire FHSA*, and member of the Dental Vocational Training Authority.

Mr. John Renshaw: Non-executive member of North Yorkshire DHA*, and member of the Dental Vocational Training Authority.

Professor Alasdair Geddes: Non-executive member of North Birmingham DHA, and member of the Health Education Authority*.

NHS Trusts

Mr. Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list, for each NHS trust within the North Nottinghamshire and Nottingham district health authority areas, those non-executive directors who live (a) within and (b) outside the boundaries of each district health authority.

Mr. Malone [pursuant to his reply, 25 May 1994, c. 214–15]: I regret that there were errors in the previous reply.

I have today placed in the Library a revised list of those chairmen and non-executive directors of national health service trusts who live outside the boundaries of the health authority in which their trust is situated.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if she will list, for each NHS trust within the Sheffield district health authority area, those chairmen and non-executive directors who live (a) within and (b) outside the Sheffield district health authority boundary;

(2) pursuant to her answer of 16 May, Official Report, column 324, if she will list, for each NHS trust in the Trent region, those chairmen and non-executive directors who live outside the boundaries of the district health authority area within which that trust is situated;

(7) if she will list for each NHS trust, in the former North Western region, those chairmen and non-executive directors who live outside the boundaries of the district health authority in which that trust is situated;

(8) if she will list for each NHS trust, in the former South Western region, those chairmen and non-executive directors who live outside the boundaries of the district health authority in which that trust is situated;

(9) if she will list for each NHS trust in the West Midlands region, those chairmen and non-executive directors who live outside the boundaries of the district health authority in which that trust is situated;

(10) if she will list for each NHS trust in the former Oxford region, those chairmen and non-executive directors who live outside the boundaries of the district health authority in which that trust is situated;

(11) if she will list for each NHS trust in the former North West Thames region, those chairmen and non-executive directors who live outside the boundaries of the district health authority in which that trust is situated;

(12) if she will list for each NHS trust in the former South West Thames region, those chairmen and non-executive directors who live outside the boundaries of the district health authority in which that trust is situated;

(13) if she will list for each national health service trust in the former North East Thames region, those chairmen and non-executive directors who live outside the boundaries of the district health authority in which that trust is situated;

(14) if she will list for each national health service trust in the former Yorkshire region, those chairmen and non-executive directors who live outside the boundaries of the district health authority in which that trust is situated;

(15) if she will list, for each NHS trust in the former South East Thames region, those chairman and non-executive directors who live outside the boundaries of the district health authority in which that trust is situated.

Mr. Malone: [pursuant to his replies, 16 May 1994, c. 324, 14 June 1994, c. 374–75, 1 July 1994, c. 741–44, 4 July 1994, c. 102–4, 5 July 1994, c. 193–96, 6 July 1994, c. 219–22, 7 July 1994, c. 313–17 and 8 July 1994, c. 371–74]: I regret that there were errors in the previous replies.

I have today placed in the Library a revised list of those chairmen and non-executive directors of national health service trusts who live outside the boundaries of the health authority in which their trust is situated.

Allitt Report

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress there has been in implementing the recommendations made in the report [illegible] Allitt inquiry published in February 1994.

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The following progress has been made:

Recommendation 1.

We recommended that, for all those seeking entry to the nursing profession, in addition to routine references the most recent employer or place of study should be asked to provide at least a record of time taken off on grounds of sickness.

From April 1995, there will be consistent and agreed guidelines on seeking references from the most recent employer or place of study on a record of time taken off on grounds of sickness. The English National Board for Nursing, Midwifery and Health Visiting (ENB) has issued draft regulations and guidelines which will meet this recommendation. Additionally, the University and Colleges Admission Service has agreed to harmonise their arrangements with those of the ENB.

Recommendation 2.

We recommend that in every case Coroners should send copies of post mortem reports to any consultant who has been involved in the patient's care prior to death whether or not demanded under Rule 57 of the Coroner's Rules 1984.

My right hon. and learned Friend the Home Secretary, in whose area of responsibility this recommendation falls, intends to commend the principles of the recommendation in a circular to be issued to all coroners in England and Wales later this month.

Recommendation 3.

We recommend that the provision of paediatric pathology services be reviewed with a view to ensuring that such services be engaged in every case in which the death of a child is unexpected or clinically unaccountable, whether the post mortem examination is ordered by a Coroner or in routine hospital practice.

This recommendation has been considered by the Strategic Review of Pathology Services which advises that more work is required on a number of detailed operational issues. A Working Group to look at the issues involved will be set up.

Recommendations 4,5,6,7,8 and 9

Recommendation 4.

We recommend that no candidate for nursing in whom there is evidence of major personality disorder should be employed in the profession.

Recommendation 5.

We recommend that nurses should undergo formal health screening when they obtain their first posts after qualifying. We acknowledge that in Allitt's case this was done.

Recommendation 6.

We recommend that the possibility be reviewed of making available to the Occupational Health Departments any records of absence through sickness from any institution which an applicant for a nursing post has attended or been employed by.

Recommendation 7.

We recommend that procedures for management referrals to Occupational Health should make clear the criteria which should trigger such referrals.

Recommendation 8.

We recommend that further consideration be given to how the suggestion of the Chairman of the Association of NHS Occupational Physicians could be applied in practice.

The Chairman suggested that applicants who show one or more of (excessive absence through sickness, excessive use of counselling or medical facilities or self-harming behaviour) should not be accepted for training until they have shown the ability to live an independent life without professional support and be in employment for at least two years.

Recommendation 9.

We recommend that consideration be given to how GPs might, with the candidate's consent, be asked to certify that there is nothing in the medical history of a candidate for employment in the NHS which would make them unsuitable for their chosen occupation.

Guidance on occupational health is to be issued shortly which will cover all these recommendations. Together with the English National Board's new guidelines, this guidance will establish better procedures for selection of student nurses for training, the selection of staff to work on children's wards and the follow up of staff who have a history of excessive absence through sickness.

Recommendation 10.

We recommend that the Department of Health should take steps to ensure that its guide "Welfare of Children and Young People in Hospital", is more closely followed.

The guide referred to make clear that hospitals themselves should determine the number of staff they require to look after the children in their care. It also made a number of recommendations about staffing levels. We have surveyed the current staffing arrangements in paediatric nursing and identified a need for further improvement in some places. For daytime shifts nearly 50 per cent. of hospitals meet the recommendations and among those units not yet there some 40 per cent. have plans in place for increasing the numbers of trained childrens nurses. The results of the survey will be made available shortly and a copy will be made available in the Library. There has been a considerable growth in the number of nurses entering training for paediatric nursing in recent years: up from 183 in 1988 to 819 in 1992–93 for pre-registration training and from 628 to 811 for post registration training over the five year period. Training commissions for paediatric nurses rose by 36 per cent. between 1991–92 and 1994–95 (from 879 per year to 1198) reflecting increased employer demand.

Recommendation 11.

We recommend that in the event of a failure of an alarm on monitoring equipment, an untoward incident report should be completed and the equipment serviced before it is used again.

This recommendation has been considered by the Expert Advisory Working Group appointed by the Medical Devices Agency who have responsibility for the safety and quality of medical devices. The draft recommendations of this Expert Group go further than those of recommendation 11. The Group is expected to present its final report later this month.

Recommendation 12.

We recommend that reports of serious untoward incidents to District and Regional Health Authorities should be made in writing and through a single channel which is known to all involved.

We will shortly be writing to all Regional Directors requiring them to establish lines of reporting with Chief Executives of all NHS Trusts so that there can be swift and effective reporting of any such untoward incidents.

Written Answers to Questions

DEFENCE

RAF Board of Inquiry

Mr. Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he intends to divulge to the next of kin of those killed in the accident between a helicopter and a RAF Tornado on 23 June 1993, in Cumbria the results of the board of inquiry.

Mr. Soames: A summary of the findings of the board of inquiry into this accident has already been provided to the next of kin of those killed.

Mr. Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects the RAF board of inquiry to report into the accident involving a civilian helicopter and an RAF Tornado in Cumbria on 23 June 1993.

Mr. Soames: The board of inquiry into this accident is complete and a summary of its findings has been placed in the Library of the House.

VSEL

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the powers accruing to him from the Government's golden share in VSEL.

Mr. Freeman: The principal rights attaching to the special share in VSEL are:

> (a) to veto disposal of the whole, or a material part, of the assets, and any voluntary winding-up, of the company;
> (b) to speak at shareholders' meetings; and
> (c) to veto changes to certain of the Articles of Association which prevent any one party controlling more than 15 per cent. of the equity and require that the Chairman, Chief Executive, Managing Director and a majority of all Directors are citizens of the United Kingdom.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions he has had with (a) GEC–Marconi and (b) British Aerospace over a takeover of VSEL.

Mr. Freeman: Ministers and officials of my Department have had a number of discussions with both GEC and British Aerospace on this subject.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what assessment he has made of the implications of the possible takeover of VSEL by (a) GEC or (b) British Aerospace for future decisions for the procurement of batch 2 Trafalgar class nuclear submarines;

(2) what assessment he has made of the implications of a takeover of VSEL by (a) GEC or (b) British Aerospace for the Government's competition policy in the defence sector.

Mr. Freeman: My Department will, in the usual way, be giving its views to the regulatory authorities on the competition and any other relevant aspects of the possible takeover of VSEL. Those views are confidential.

Competition

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his Department's policy concerning competition in the defence industry; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Freeman: My Department recognises the importance of a healthy and competitive defence industry. Any restructuring of the defence industry is primarily a matter for the market, subject, of course, to the regulatory authorities, to whom my Department makes its views known, in confidence, on particular cases.

Gulf War

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what exposure to chemical agents was experienced by United Kingdom forces in the Gulf war.

Mr. Soames: This is a matter for the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment, Porton Down, under its framework document. I have asked the chief executive of the CBDE to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Graham Pearson to Dr. David Clark, dated 3 November 1994:

> 1. Your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Defence asking him what exposure to chemical agents was experienced by United Kingdom Forces in the Gulf War has been passed to me to reply as Chief Executive of the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment.
> 2. During Operating GRANBY, the potential hazard to Service personnel resulting from the bombing of Iraqi targets at which chemical weapons were stored was recognised by the Ministry of Defence. The Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment made an assessment of the potential downwind hazard distances based on various assumptions for the quantity of agent that might be released as a result of a bombing attack and for the associated meteorological conditions.
> 3. The result of the assessment indicated that even assuming simultaneous release of the majority of agent from several bunkers under meteorological conditions which favoured the downwind travel of the agent cloud and ignoring the fact that chemical agents are organic materials which are destroyed by combustion, the maximum distance at which there would be any hazard was of the order of a few tens of kilometres. In practice, simultaneous release is unlikely to occur, agent will be destroyed by combustion and meteorological conditions will be less favourable resulting in a significantly reduced downwind hazard distance.
> 4. The conclusion was that there was no evidence that British Servicemen and women would be exposed to chemical warfare agent as a result of bombing attacks. Our appreciation is that the US Department of Defense carried out similar studies and reached similar conclusions. In addition, there was no confirmed detection of chemical warfare agents at any time by the UK Forces in the Gulf War.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence for what purposes organo-phosphate malathion pesticide was used by British forces in the Gulf war; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Soames: A dusting powder containing 1 per cent. malathion was used by British forces environmental health personnel to treat about 50 lice-infested Iraqi troops at the prisoner of war enclosure at Quaisuma. Owing to the small number involved, each prisoner was treated individually and no lengthy collective treatments took place.

Malathion is recommended in standard therapeutic textbooks as a treatment of choice for lice infestation and several preparations are commercially available in the United Kingdom, including body lotions and hair shampoos.

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many British troops were exposed to organ-phosphorous pesticides, including malathion, during the Gulf War; and what research his Department has undertaken into the links between the use of these pesticides and Gulf war syndrome.

Mr. Soames: I am aware of only 10 British service personnel who would have been involved with organ-phosphorous pesticides used by United Kingdom forces during the Gulf conflict. These 10 were members of a medical team involving in delousing some 50 Iraqi troops with a dusting powder containing 1 per cent. malathion at the prisoner of war enclosure at Quaisuma. Malathion is recommended in standard therapeutic textbooks as a treatment of choice for lice infestation and several preparations are commercially available in the United Kingdom, including body lotions and shampoos.

No clinical evidence indicative of exposure to organo-phosphates has been found among the service personnel who have come forward with concerns about their health related to service in the Gulf. No specific research into organo-phosphorous has therefore been carried out in relation to the alleged Gulf war syndrome, though evidence from all relevant sources is closely monitored.

LSD Experiments

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the use of LSD in experiments on British service personnel; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Soames: This is a matter for the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment, Porton Down under its framework document. I have asked the chief executive of CBDE to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Graham Pearson to Dr. David Clark, dated 3 November 1994:

1. Your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Defence asking him if he will make a statement on the use of LSD in experiments on British Service personnel has been passed to me to reply as Chief Executive of the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment.

2. The role of the Chemical and Biological Establishment is to carry out research to ensure that the UK Armed Forces are provided with effective protective measures against the threat that chemical or biological weapons may be used against them. As part of that programme, evaluation is carried out of chemicals that may be utilised by an aggressor as a chemical warfare agent.

3. An appreciation of the effects of LSD on man and the knowledge that LSD could be synthesised led to research in the 1960s at the then Chemical Defence Experimental Establishment which was renamed the Chemical Defence Establishment in 1969 into whether LSD might be used by an aggressor as an incapacitating CW agent and one which might lead to the loss of will to fight.

4. The work carried out by CBDE Porton Down was solely to determine that protective measures were appropriate and were largely concerned in assessing the effects of LSD on troops in a military setting, where the behaviour of volunteers who had taken LSD was compared with that of control volunteers who had not taken LSD. All volunteers were subjected to stringent medical and psychological screening.

The assessment was made that although LSD could be synthesised, it was immensely expensive and being a solid it would be difficult to disseminate further and as the effects were not highly predictable, the conclusion was reached that LSD would not present a significant battlefield hazard.

Kuwait

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what documentary evidence he has regarding the nature of the substances found by 21 EOD Squadron, British Royal Engineers in August 1991 at a school in Kuwait.

Mr. Soames: The report by 21st EOD Squadron was received by my Department in August 1991 and, in accordance with its recommendations, samples of the substance collected in Kuwait city were submitted for laboratory analysis. The CBDE analytical report showed that the samples were consistent with being fuming nitric acid, a rocket motor propellant; there was no evidence of any chemical warfare agent being present.

Defence Industry

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) when he last met the chief executive of British Aerospace;

(2) when he last met the chairman of GEC-Marconi.

Mr. Freeman: Ministers of my Department meet senior representatives of the defence industry frequently. My right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Defence met Mr. Dick Evans, the chief executive of British Aerospace plc, on 11 July and I met him on 1 November. I met right hon. Friend the Member for Chertsey and Walton (Sir G. Pattie) joint chairman of GEC-Marconi Ltd., on 31 October.

Defence Procurement Policy

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence whether his Department's defence procurement policy requires the availability of more than one facility to build large naval vessels.

Mr. Freeman: My Department's procurement policy is based on competition wherever practicable.

Departmental Property

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what properties are owned or leased by his Department for the use of Ministers; what was the total running cost for each property for the latest year available broken down into (a) furniture and fittings, (b) maintenance, (c) staffing, including the number of butlers, cooks and housekeepers,(d) food and hospitality and (e) other costs; what is the estimated value of each property; and how many times in the latest year the property was stayed in overnight by a Minister.

Mr. Soames: The only property available to Ministers in my Department is a flat in Admiralty house, Whitehall, which is occupied by my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Defence. Admiralty house is a freehold property managed by Property Holdings—a division of the DOE—to which my Department pays and annual rent of £56,276 for the flat, together with an annual maintenance charge of £18,396. The estimated value of the property is unknown. During the last financial year, 1993–94, £13.35 was spent on furniture and fittings for the flat; £13 was spent on official entertainment; and £245 was spent on other costs. There are no staff costs attributable to the Defence budget as the Secretary of State employs his own cleaner. The flat is used regularly by the Secretary of State during the working week.

Spencer Stuart Consultants

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many contracts his Department or Government agencies responsible to his Department have entered into with Spencer Stuart consultants in the last two years.

Mr. Soames: There have been no centrally placed contracts with Spencer Stuart consultants. While lower value contracts many have been let with the company by subordinate budget-holders, the information is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Lockheed

Mr. Eastham: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 11 July, Official Report, column 440, when he expects to write to the hon. Member for Manchester, Blackley, on visits to Lockheed facilities in the United States of America.

Mr. Freeman: I have written to the hon. Member today. I regret the delay in responding to his original question.

RAF Doctors (Training)

Ms Corston: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence in what circumstances it would be possible for a civilian junior hospital doctor—house officer—in general medicine to take up a post in a Royal Air Force medical centre as a Royal Air Force medical officer without attending the courses at RAF Cranwell, RAF Halton and RAF Farnborough.

Mr. Soames: I am not aware of any circumstances in which a house officer would be employed in a Royal Air Force medical centre, as the term "house officer" implies that full medical registration has not been achieved.

Ms Corston: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the lengths and locations of the courses for junior doctors entering the Royal Air Force as junior medical officers for (a) officer training, (b) medical administration, occupational health and forces classification training and (c) aviation medicine training.

Mr. Soames: The lengths and locations of the courses are:

a. Officer Training - eight weeks at RAF Cranwell.

b. Initial Medical Officer Training (Administration) - two weeks at the Institute of Health and Medical training, RAF Halton.

c. Initial Medical Officer Training (Aviation Medicine) - two weeks at RAF Farnborough and the Aviation Medicine Training Centre at RAF North Luffenham.

Market Testing

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his current calculation of the costs of preparation for market testing in his Department in terms of (a) payments to consultants and (b) other costs.

Mr. Freeman: The MOD's competing for quality programme, which includes the market testing of activities, aims at achieving long-term savings and quality improvements in relation to the resources required to undertake the services involved. In the period April 1992 to September 1993, some £346·2 million of activities were exposed to the competing for quality process, creating gross savings of £19·8 million. Final details for the year ending September 1994 are not yet available, but activities in excess of the target £216 million have been exposed to the competing for quality process with expected saving of 20 per cent. A breakdown of the Department's costs from April 1992 to June 1994 is as follows:

Consultancy costs £3·1 million

Other costs £5·4 million

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence in what circumstances individuals or companies will be prohibited from bidding for his Department's work in respect of market testing or contracting out.

Mr. Freeman: In selecting companies to tender for MOD work, the Department has a responsibility to ensure that the companies are satisfactory in terms of financial standing, and that they have the technical capability and capacity to perform the work.

Turnhouse Airport

Dr. Reid: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what facilities his Department operates at Turnhouse airport; and what plans he has to close them.

Mr. Soames: The following units are located at RAF Turnhouse:

East Lowlands University Air Squadron

No. 12 Air Experience Flight

No. 3 Flt Army Air Corps (Volunteers)

Joint Maritime Operational Training Staffs

The Air Cadets Regional Headquarters (Scotland and Northern Ireland)

Air Cadets (CCF) RAF Liaison Officer for Scotland and Northern Ireland

RAF Turnhouse also parents a number of minor off-site units.

There are no current plans to close any of these units. The defence costs study concluded, however, that there was scope for rationalising university air squadrons, and this work is currently underway. Should any proposals be made which would affect the East Lowlands UAS, or any of the other units at RAF Turnhouse, they would of course be subject to consultation in the normal way.

Al Yamamah Agreement

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 24 October, Official Report, column 495, on the Al Yamamah agreement, if he will now make it his policy to request from The Sunday Times the original tape recordings and other evidence.

Mr. Freeman: No.

Slovakia (Low flying)

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what response he has made to the offer from the Government of Slovakia about low flying; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Soames: My noble Friend the Under-Secretary of State for Defence visited Slovakia in August. During informal discussions, the then Slovak Defence Minister proposed a range of areas for closer bilateral defence co-operation, in the context of partnership for peace; including opportunities for low flying. We are looking closely at those proposals.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Lord President of the Council if he will investigate the methods by which procedures could be changed so that hon. Members could table questions for written answer during parliamentary recesses, other than in August, and receive answers.

Mr. Newton: My hon. Friend may wish to ask the Procedure Committee to look into his suggestion.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Quangos

Mr. Grocott: To ask the President of the Board of Trade which former hon. Members of this House have been appointed since 1988 by his Department to quasi-autonomous non-governmental organisations; and if he will list, in each case, the title of the post, the salary, the duration of the appointment, and the party which each represented as an hon. Member.

Mr. Ian Taylor: The information available is as follows:

Name	Post	Salary	Duration	Party
Sir Julian Ridsdale	Member of the Simpler Trade Procedures Board	Unpaid	27 October 1992–31 December 1994	Conservative
Charles Longbottom	Non-Executive Director of British Shipbuilders	£5,000	Since 1988 (renewed on a yearly basis)	Conservative
Robin Hodgson	Member of the West Midlands Industrial Development Board	Unpaid	1 January 1989–31 December 1994	Conservative

Oil and Gas Industry

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what consultations will be held regarding the possible withdrawal of any nominated blocks from the 16th round on environmental grounds.

Mr. Charles Wardle: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answers I gave the hon. Member for Pembroke (Mr. Ainger) on 25 October, Official Report, columns 556-58 and 559-60.

My officials recently met members of the Wildlife and Countryside Link consortium to discuss their views on the nominated blocks for the round. I will, of course, take the WCL's comments into account when deciding which blocks should or should not be offered for licence in the 16th round.

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what environmental criteria were used to exclude blocks from the 14th offshore oil and gas licensing round; and whether it is planned to use the same criteria for the 16th round.

Mr. Charles Wardle: A number of blocks were not offered in the 14th round because it was felt that, on balance, it would not be possible to agree licence conditions which would allow the prospective operator to carry out exploration activities without compromising the interests of other users of the sea and environmental sensitivities.

Decisions on which blocks can be offered for licence in the 16th round and what conditions will be attached to them will be taken on the basis of consultations with interested parties, including the Joint Nature Conservation Committee and other environmental bodies, about the sensitivities present in individual areas.

Mr. Macdonald: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what environmental criteria will be imposed on licences granted in the 16th round; and what special conditions there will be upon activity which might affect protected areas.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Any environmental conditions applied to blocks offered in round will be consistent with our commitment to protect the environment. As such, we will take account of the views of our consultees in formulating them. In some cases, the conditions may include restrictions on the timing and extent of seismic and drilling activities.

Nuclear Review

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if there will be a further period of consultation following the publication of the nuclear review.

Mr. Eggar: No decisions have yet been taken about publication of the conclusions of the nuclear review. An announcement will be made in due course.

Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when he expects to publish the findings of the nuclear review.

Mr. Eggar: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Sherwood (Mr. Tipping) on 19 October, Official Report, column 239.

Fluorocarbons

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if it is his policy that refrigeration systems that avoid the use of fluorocarbons are best practice and eligible for inclusion in his Department's best practice or DEMOS programme.

Mr. Ian Taylor: DEMOS—DTI's environmental management options scheme—is no longer open to applications for grant assistance.

The joint DTI/DoE environmental technology best practice programme aims to promote better environmental performance and to increase the competitiveness of United Kingdom industry and commerce. Emphasis will be on waste minimisation and reducing pollution at source in the manufacturing process. In the selection of projects for inclusion in the programme, preference is given to those lying within the areas to which the programme is currently giving special attention.

These areas are currently foundries, metal finishing/surface engineering and releases of volatile organic compounds. However, any project encompassing the use of cleaner technology can be considered for inclusion in the programme if it has sufficient merit and satisfies the announced selection criteria, including those relating to potential for stimulating national cost savings.

Those wishing to propose technologies and techniques to the programme should in the first instance contact the environmental helpline on 0800 585794.

Wavertree Technology Park

Mr. Alton: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when an announcement will be made about the application of Sony for regional grant assistance for the development of a site at Wavertree technology park, Liverpool; how many jobs are involved; what representations he has received from hon. Members; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Charles Wardle: An announcement will be made shortly. Two hundred and fifty new jobs are involved. The only other representation on this matter, received by my Department has been from the hon. Member for Liverpool, Walton (Mr. Kilfoyle).

Electricity Disconnections

Ms Gordon: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many electricity disconnections have been carried out since 1993.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Disconnection figures are kept by the Office of Electricity Regulation. However, I can confirm that 3,297 electricity customers were disconnected in 1993, and for the first six months of 1994, 654 customers were disconnected.

Departmental Property

Mr. Byers: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what properties are owned or leased by his Department for the use of Ministers; what was the total running cost for each property for the latest year broken down into (a) furniture and fittings, (b) maintenance, (c) staffing, including the number of butlers, cooks and housekeepers, (d) food and hospitality and (e) other costs; what is the estimated value of each property; and how many times in the latest year the property was stayed in overnight by a Minister.

Mr. Ian Taylor: None.

Electricity

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was (a) the average household electricity bill for each of the regional electricity companies for each year since 1985 and (b) the combined average for England and Wales in (i) cash terms and (ii) real terms.

Mr. Charles Wardle: Annual bills for households consuming 3,300 KWh[1] of electricity in a year for each regional electricity company in England and Wales are given in the tables.

Coal Industry

Mr. Tipping: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the consultancies undertaken by Warden Armstrong, mining consultants; what were their terms of reference; when they were started and completed; and at what cost.

Mr. Eggar: Wardell Armstrong were engaged from 5 August 1991 to provide advice to the Secretary of State on technical matters, including licensing, in connection with the privatisation of the coal industry. This work is continuing. Details of Wardell Armstrong's fees are commercially confidential.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans he has to publish the bids for the British Coal opencast contract in south Wales.

Mr. Charles Wardle: British Coal frequently lets contracts to manage various aspects of its opencast coaling operations in South Wales and elsewhere. Publication of bids for such contracts would be a matter for British Coal.

There are no plans to publish the bids for the sale of the South Wales Regional Coal Company. This information is commercially confidential. It was announced on 12 October that the preferred bidder for South Wales is Celtic Energy.

Mr. Tipping: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what salaries the part-time members of the coal authority receive.

Mr. Charles Wardle: The part-time members of the Coal Authority receive a salary of £5,500 per annum.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what guidelines or procedures his Department has in place to ensure there are no conflicts of interests between managers at British Coal who manage tenders to the private sector and who subsequently sit on the board of a firm set up to operate such tenders or contracts.

Mr. Eggar: This is a matter for British Coal.

Mr. Cummings: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list for each coal stocking site in the county of Durham the length of planning consents for the stocking of coal, the owners of the sites and the tonnage of coal stocked on each site.

Mr. Charles Wardle: This is a matter for British Coal. However, I understand that the only such site in the county of Durham is the former Easington colliery site.

Face Paints

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) if he will revise his Department's procedures for detecting dangerous products, with particular reference to face paints; and if he will ensure that measures are taken to license face paint;

(2) if he will institute an immediate inquiry into the company selling the children's face paint which has resulted in children in Edinburgh being taken to hospital, with particular reference as to how the product came to be made available; and if he will ensure that his consumer safety unit co-ordinates the recall of all Aqua Fantasy face paint products.

Mr. Ian Taylor: Face paints for children are subject to the requirements of the Toys (Safety) Regulations 1989, as amended in 1993 and the Cosmetic Products (Safety) Regulations 1989, as amended in 1990, 1991, 1992, 1993 and 1994. These regulations implement EC directives. Day-to-day enforcement of safety legislation is the responsibility of local authority trading standards departments. Trading standards officers have all the necessary powers to enforce safety legislation and to take appropriate action when an unsafe product is found on sale.

There are no requirements to license face paints but the toys regulations require manufacturers or their authorised representative to maintain a dossier to demonstrate the safety of their products and to make this available to the enforcement authorities on request. A similar provision will be introduced for cosmetics by an amendment to the cosmetics directive.

The consumer safety unit of my Department is in close contact with the Department of Health and the trading standards administration about the face paints sold under the name of "Aqua Fantasy". It has been established that there are two importers of the products, both of whom are co-operating with trading standards officers in the recall of the products. Tests are also being carried out on the paints to establish whether they meet the safety regulations applicable to them.

The Department of Health issued a press release on 31 October alerting the public to the dangers associated with the face paints. Information is also being sought from the manufacturer and the United Kingdom importers on the possible causes of the recent accidents given that these products have been on the market for four years.

Spencer Stuart Consultants

Mr. Byers: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many contracts his Department or Government agencies responsible to his Department have entered into with Spencer Stuart consultants in the last two years.

Mr. Ian Taylor: The Department is not aware of any contracts for consultancy advice awarded centrally to Spencer Stuart consultants in the last two years. I have asked the chief executives of the agencies to reply direct to this question, as it falls into the category of their day-to-day operational matters. I will arrange for copies of these letters to be placed in the Library of the House.

Insolvency Service

Mr. Devlin: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what advice he has received on the Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) Regulations with regard to the Insolvency Service.

Mr. Jonathan Evans: No decision to contract out work of official receivers has yet been taken.

In the circumstances it is far too early to consider the issue of Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) Regulations, the implications of which may not become clear until the nature of proposals in any bidding process could be assessed.

Mr. Devlin: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will publish the full Stoy Hayward report on the privatisation of the Insolvency Service.

Mr. Jonathan Evans: Stoy Hayward's report has been published by placing copies in the Libraries of the House and DTI library. The published version of the report does not include the appendices produced by the consultants as these contain financial information which is commercially confidential.

Easington Colliery

Mr. Cummings: To as the President of the Board of Trade what discussions he has had with the various interested bodies on the future development of the Easington colliery site.

Mr. Charles Wardle: This is a matter for British Coal. I understand that British Coal, which occupies the site under a long lease, is currently in discussion with the freeholder over the future of the site.

Mr. Cummings: To ask the President of the board of Trade when he expects the coal at present stocked on the Easington colliery site to be sold or removed.

Mr. Charles Wardle: This is a matter for British Coal.

Monopolies and Mergers Commission

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will ensure that Sir Peter Levene will not be involved in discussions of references to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jonathan Evans: Decisions on references of mergers to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission are for my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade, after receiving independent advice from the Director General of Fair Trading. Anyone may put views to the Director General on possible references. In reaching his decision, the President takes great care to ensure that no conflicts of interest arise. He will naturally not discuss with Sir Peter Levene any case in which there might be such a conflict.

Bankruptcy

Mr. Devlin: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what legal advice he has received on the impact that privatisation could have on future disqualification of bankrupts.

Mr. Jonathan Evans: Stoy Hayward Consulting reported that the contracting out of official receivers' case administration work would enable official receivers to concentrate more on their investigative role and I have not been advised that contracting out would have any impact on the Insolvency Service's disqualification effort.

Nolan Committee

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make it his policy to make available to the Nolan committee documents held by his Department on British-registered companies with which Ministers of former Ministers of Her Majesty's Government had a business involvement before becoming Government Ministers after they had entered Parliament.

Mr. Heseltine: I shall write to the hon. Gentleman as soon as possible.

Al-Bilad (UK) Ltd.

Mr. Heseltine: I shall write to the hon. Gentleman as soon as possible.

Mr. Ancram: My hon. Friend Baroness Denton will write to the hon. Gentleman.

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many contracts his Department or Government agencies responsible to his Department have entered into with Spencer Stuart consultants in the last two years.

Sir John Wheeler: Our records show that Spencer Stuart consultants were not employed by any of the Northern Ireland Departments or agencies during the financial year 1992–93 and 1993–94.

	1 April 1992– 30 September 1993 £	1 October 1993– 31 December 1993 £	1 January 1994– 30 June 1994 £
Total Consultancy Costs	278,900	56,000	283,600
Other Departmental Costs	144,300	181,300	431,500
Total	423,200	237,300	715,100

Prison Service

Mr. Ellestson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has for the future management of the Northern Ireland Prison Service.

Sir John Wheeler: Following completion of a prior options study into the future management of the Northern Ireland Prison Service, the Government have decided that the service should now begin preparations to become a next steps agency on 1 April 1995. That will give the service greater freedom to manage its resources within a framework which sets out its responsibilities, targets and appropriate performance measures. The Prison Service will continue to be accountable to my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State.

Military Complaints Procedures

Mr. Clappison: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what response he has received from the General Officer Commanding Northern Ireland to the recommendations contained in the first annual report of the independent assessor of military complaints procedures.

Sir Patrick Mayhew: I have received a detailed reply from the General Officer Commanding, Sir Roger Wheeler, to the proposals contained in David Hewitt's first annual report. I very much welcome the positive response from the GOC, which states that he will be able to adopt five of the seven recommendations and all 11 suggestions made by Mr. Hewitt.

I wish to pay due credit to the complaints procedures operated by the army in Northern Ireland, which have helped to establish and maintain a good and improving relationship with the community. The GOC has made it clear to me that procedures are constantly reviewed so that improvements can be made where necessary, and Mr. Hewitt's proposals will play a central part in this. Both the GOC and I look forward to receiving his continued suggestions and advice.

PRIME MINISTER

Media and Broadcasting

Mr. Allen: To ask the Prime Minister which individual or institution will receive from the President of the EU Parliament the resolution of the EU Parliament on media ownership.

(2) if he will instigate an investigation into matters in the letter from the hon. Member for Blaenau Gwent on 26 October.

The Prime Minister: I have not seen the book referred to. If I have anything to add at a later stage, I will write to the hon. Member.

The Guardian Newspaper

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Prime Minister when the Cabinet Secretary first knew of the alleged use of House of Commons notepaper by The Guardian newspaper to obtain information about the hotel bill of the right hon. Member for Thanet, South (Mr. Aitken); when the Prime Minister was informed; and what steps he took to bring the matter to the attention of the House authorities.

The Prime Minister: The matter first came to the attention of my right hon. Friend, the Member for Thanet, South following the publication of an article in The Guardian on 10 May 1994; he reported it to me and the Cabinet Secretary on 11 May 1994.

My right hon. Friend considered raising a complaint immediately but decided not to pursue the matter at that time. What has since been revealed is that the forgery was part of a concerted attempt to cover up collusion.

The Prime Minister: The Department of the Environment for England, and the Welsh Office for Wales, are responsible for setting and publishing the standard spending assessments for all local authorities.

In England, there is a distinct component of the SSA for police; this is prepared in discussion with the Home Office. In Wales, there is no such distinct component, but the SSAs for county councils include provision for the police service.

Nolan Committee

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Prime Minister if allegations of illegal donations to the election funds of political parties are to be brought to the attention of Lord Nolan's committee on the standards of conduct in public life.

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Meirionnyddd Nant Conwy (Mr. Llwyd) on 31 October 1994, Official Report, column 911.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Prime Minister what remuneration will be received by each member of the Nolan committee in regard to their time commitments; what expenses are to be made available to members of the Committee; for what duration each committee member is appointed; and from what budget administrative and support resources for the Nolan committee will be drawn.

Member for Norfolk, South (Mr. MacGregor), while acting as Secretary of State for Transport gave to the British Railways Board in connection with the employment of Hill Samuel to provide advice on its disposal programme; and on what date;

(2) pursuant to his answer of 31 October, Official Report, column 914, if he will now state the date on which the right hon. Member for Norfolk, South (Mr. MacGregor) indicated his intention to leave the Government;

(3) if Messrs Hill Samuel paid pension contributions on behalf of the right hon. Member for Norfolk, South (Mr. MacGregor) during his period of ministerial office or any part thereof; and if he will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: I will write to the hon. Member.

The Prime Minister: My hon. Friend, the Member for Poole (Mr. Ward), has resigned as a full member of the delegation, following his appointment as my parliamentary private secretary, and has been replaced by my hon. (2) pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Workington (Mr. Campbell-Savours) of 25 October, Official Report, column 520, regarding the Al Yamamah agreement, if he will set out the nature of the errors to which he refers.

The Prime Minister: I will write to the hon. Member.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Probate

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department (1) if he will introduce legislation to enable banks and other institutions in England and Wales to comply with instructions on the disposal of assets from a person granted probate under the law of Scotland without the need for the grant to be resealed under the law of England and Wales;

(2) whether a grant for a registrar in Scotland under rule 19 of the Non-contentious Probate Rules 1987, may have effect in England and Wales if it has not been resealed by the English courts;

(3) if he will introduce legislation to enable banks in England and Wales to release money from a bank account to a person or persons granted probate by the crown courts to administer the estate of a deceased person holding that account without a need for the grant to be resealed by a court in England and Wales.

Mr. John M. Taylor: The Administration of Estates Act 1971 already makes provision for the reciprocal recognition in any one part of the United Kingdom of grants and confirmations issued in any other part, without the need for resealing.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department whether Scotland is regarded as a foreign country for the purposes of rule 19 of the Non-Contentious Probate Rules 1987; and whether the registrar may accept under sub-paragraph (a) an affidavit as to the law of Scotland from a person who is not a notary practising in Scotland.

Mr. John M. Taylor: For the purposes of rule 19, "foreign law" includes the law of any part of the United Kingdom other than England and Wales. By virtue of the Civil Evidence Act 1972, it is not necessary for a witness giving evidence of foreign law to be a practitioner of the system of law in question, provided he is otherwise suitably qualified to do so.

Departmental Property

Mr. Byers: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what properties are owned or leased by the Department for the use of Ministers; what was the total running cost for each property for the latest year available broken down into (a) furniture and fittings, (b) maintenance, (c) staffing, including the number of butlers and cooks and housekeepers, (d) food and hospitality and (e) other costs; what is the estimated value of each property; and how many times in the latest year the property was stayed in overnight by a Minister.

Mr. John M. Taylor: Excluding Departmental offices, the Lord Chancellor's Department has no properties which are owned or leased for the use of Ministers.

Legal Aid

Mr. Byers: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will identify individuals who have received more than £1 million from the legal aid fund towards their legal costs in the past 10 years; what has been the total amount paid in each case; and what was the nature of the legal proceedings.

Mr. John M. Taylor: I regret that it has not been possible to provide an answer before prorogation. I shall write to the hon. Member and place a copy of the letter in the Library.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department (1) if he will list by region the number of fraudulent legal aid claims by solicitors for the period 1992–93 and 1993–94;

(2) what percentage of total moneys paid out by the legal aid fund in each region relate to fraudulent claims by solicitors in the last three years;

(3) how many cases of possible fraudulent claims for legal aid are being investigated by him in each region.

Mr. John M. Taylor: I will write to the hon. Member.

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department in how many civil cases in 1993–94 both parties were in receipt of legal aid.

Mr. John M. Taylor: This information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Michael Brown: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what plans the Government have to improve control of the green form scheme.

Mr. John M. Taylor: The green form scheme is an important means of access to legal advice for people on low incomes. In 1993–94, over 1,600,000 people received help from the green form scheme. Over recent months however the Government and the Legal Aid board have become increasingly concerned about the opportunities for abuse which exist in the scheme.

As a result, the Legal Aid board has conducted an internal review of its systems for detecting fraud and abuse of the green form scheme, and has put in place a number of administrative changes designed to ensure that suspect claims under the green form scheme are speedily detected and acted upon.

In addition, the Legal Aid board has, with the Government's support, proposed a number of other changes to the green form scheme:

i) that there should be a new, more detailed, green form claims form to be used by solicitors who are not franchised by the Legal Aid board;

ii) that a solicitor should be required to seek prior authority from the Legal Aid board before giving advice under more than one green form to the same client within any period of 12 months;

iii) that the Legal Aid board's powers for dealing with cases where fraud or breaches of the legal aid regulations are suspected should be clarified in regulations.

The Legal Aid board is at present consulting the Law Society on the details of these changes. Subject to the outcome of that consultation, the necessary regulations to make these changes will be laid before Parliament as soon as possible.

Spencer Stuart Consultants

Mr. Byers: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many contracts his Department or Government agencies responsible to his Department have entered into with Spencer Stuart consultants in last two years.

Mr. John M. Taylor: There is no record of any contract being entered into with Spencer Stuart consultants in the last two years.

Small Claims

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what plans he has to alter the small claims procedure to enable a plaintiff to recover solicitors' costs from the defendant.

Mr. John M. Taylor: I will write to the hon. Member.

Deaths in Custody

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what plans he has to extend legal aid to allow the families of those who have died whilst in custody to be represented at inquests.

Mr. John M. Taylor: None. However, subject to financial eligibility, legal advice and assistance may be sought before the hearing from a solicitor under the green form scheme.

ENVIRONMENT

SSSIs

Mr. Elletson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement about threats to Britain's sites of special scientific interest.

Mr. Atkins: The Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981 provides a sound basis for the protection of sites of special scientific interest. Some 6,700 SSSIs have now been notified throughout Britain. This affords protection to the habitats of key species of flora and fauna and to a range of the main geological and landform features. In addition, in the determination of development proposals, the land use planning system takes careful account of nature conservation interests.

Local Government Reorganisation

Mr. Frank Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether all contracts entered into by local authorities, before reorganisation in accordance with Local Government Commission recommendations, will be fully honoured following implementation of Local Government Commission proposals; and whether the rights of employees will be fully protected.

Mr. Curry: Contracts of employment will transfer to the successor authority for all staff who transfer by statutory transfer order or under TUPE regulations. Transfer of rights and liabilities concerning contracts and property is currently the subject of consultation by my Department. We are also consulting on the implications of local government reorganisation for compulsory competitive tendering.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the estimated cost to date of the review of local government in England.

Mr. Curry: The Local Government Commission for England incurred expenditure of £2·056 million in 1992–93 and £5·146 million in 1993–94. We are making available grant in aid of some £8·300 million to the Commission for 1994–95.

We do not have overall figures for the expenditure incurred indirectly by central Government, or directly by local authorities, on the local government review.

Capital Receipts

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the amount of capital receipts accumulated by local authorities in England at the latest date for which information is available.

Mr. Robert B. Jones: Returns to the Department show that about £1·9 billion of usable capital receipts were held by authorities at 1 April 1994.

New Home Completions

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many new homes were completed by local authorities in England in 1978–79 and 1993–94; and how many he expects will be completed in 1994–95 and 1995–96.

Mr. Robert B. Jones: Housing associations are now the main providers of new social housing. Local authorities' primary housing tasks are the efficient management of their own stock of housing and enabling other organisations to provide new housing.

Local authorities in England completed 76,494 new dwellings during the financial year 1978–79; new towns completed a further 7,984 dwellings. Local authorities completed 1,387 new dwellings during 1993–94.

The Department does not forecast the number of new dwellings to be built by local authorities.

Departmental Property

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what properties are owned or leased by his Department for the use of Ministers; what was the total running cost for each property for the latest year available broken down into (a) furniture and fittings, (b) maintenance, (c) staffing, including the number of butlers, cooks and housekeepers, (d) food and hospitality and (e) other costs; what is the estimated value of each property; and how many times in the latest year the property was stayed in overnight by a Minister.

Sir Paul Beresford: Excluding departmental offices, the Department of the Environment does not own or lease any apartments for the use of DOE Ministers.

Dioxins

Ms Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if his Department has now had time to consider the United States Environmental Protection Agency's report on dioxins; and what account will be taken of the decisions to license the burning of recycled liquid fuel in cement kilns in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Atkins: The US Environmental Protection Agency's report, although both detailed and in parts highly technical, is still a preliminary draft, issued for public comment. It does not represent EPA policy. Its content and findings will be revised during the coming year in the light of comments received. The Government are studying the draft report, and intend to complete their own preliminary assessment of it by the end of this year. The Government will also seek the advice of the chief medical officer about the implications of this report, any decisions taken in the light of this assessment and the advice of the chief medical officer, will apply to all processes which might produce dioxins.

Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to modify his Department's policy on encouraging waste to energy incinerators following the recent report by the United States Environmental Protection Agency on the health effects of dioxins; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: The US Environmental Protection Agency's report is a preliminary draft issued for public comment and its contents and findings will be revised during the coming year in the light of comments received. The Government are studying the draft report carefully and intend to complete their own preliminary assessment of it by the end of the year.

In their response to the Royal Commission on Environmental Pollution's report on incineration of waste, the Government have already given a public assurance that, in deciding their policy on the use of incineration for waste disposal, they will take into account the advice of the chief medical officer on the implications of this and other major dioxin studies.

Water Bills

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what was the average household bill for unmetered water and sewerage for each water company for each year since 1985, and the combined average for England and Wales in (a) cash and (b) real terms;

(2) what was the percentage change in average household water and sewerage bills for each water company for each year since 1985, and the combined average change for England and Wales;

(3) what was the change in the average household water and sewerage bill for each water and sewerage company for each year since 1985, and the combined average rise each year for England and Wales in (a) cash and (b) real terms;

(4) what was the change in the average household water and sewerage bill for each water company for each year since 1985, and the combined average change each year for England and Wales in (a) cash and (b) real terms;

(5) what was the average household bill for unmetered water and sewerage for each water and sewerage company for each year since 1985, and the combined average for England and Wales in (a) cash and (b) real terms;

(6) what was the percentage change in average household water and sewerage charges for each water and sewerage company for each year since 1985, and combined average for England and Wales.

Mr. Atkins: Information on individual water company and water and sewerage company charges since 1985 is contained in "The Water Industry: United Kingdom Services and Cost and Charges for Service", published annually by the Chartered Institute of Public Finance and Accountancy, and the "The United Kingdom Water Industry: Charges for Water Services", published annually by the Centre for the Study of Regulated Industries, copies of which are available in the Library.

European Administration

Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information his Department holds about the introduction of European departments, European officers and offices in Brussels or Strasbourg by district, county and metropolitan councils; and if he will publish this information together with an estimate of the number of people employed and the costs incurred.

Mr. Robert B. Jones: My Department does not hold such information.

Spencer Stuart Consultants

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many contracts his Department or Government agencies responsible to his Department have entered into with Spencer Stuart consultants in the last two years.

Sir Paul Beresford: To the best of my knowledge, there have been no contracts that this Department, or Government agencies responsible to it, have entered into with Spencer Stuart consultants in the last two years.

Water Supplies

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) how many and what percentage of households are supplied by each of the water companies;

(2) how many, and what percentage of households are supplied by each of the water and sewerage companies.

Mr. Atkins: Information about the number of households supplied by water companies and water and sewerage companies is to be found in "Waterfacts", published annually by the Water Services Association, copies of which are available in the Library.

Public Investment Projects

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) how much private capital has been invested in public investment projects within his Department's responsibility since the 1992 autumn statement;

(2) if he will list those public investment projects within his Department's responsibility which have attracted private capital and which have been commenced since November 1993.

Sir Paul Beresford: It is not practicable to list individually the very large number of public projects which have benefited from private investment over the last two years. However, the Department and its sponsored bodies attracted some £3 billion of private investment in support of departmental programmes in 1993–94, and similarly expect to lever in over £3 billion of private funding in 1994–95. In addition, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment announced on 31 October further proposals to make it easier for local authorities to co-operate in joint ventures with the private sector. A summary of the proposals, which we aim to implement with effect from 1 April 1995, has been placed in the Library.

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer of 31 October, Official Report, column 972-73, if he will place in the Library the submission made to him on water charging systems by the water services and water companies associations.

Mr. Atkins: It is for the two associations to decide whether they wish to make public the contents of their letter to my right hon. Friend.

Housing (Multiple Occupation)

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will estimate (1) (a) how many hostels exist in England and Wales, (b) how many people live in these hostels and (c) how many of these people are on housing benefits;

(2) how many people live in houses in multiple occupation of the type described in section 345 of the Housing Act 1985; how many of these are on housing benefit; how many of these are students; and how many of these are families with children;

(3) how many houses in multiple occupation are estimated to exist under the present definition contained in section 345 of the Housing Act 1985.

Mr. Robert B. Jones: A Department of the Environment survey of local authorities estimated that in England and Wales in 1983–84 there were between 1·25 and 2 million people living in houses in multiple occupation. There is no information available on how many of these people receive housing benefit or how many are students or families with children.

The definition of a house in multiple occupation in section 345 of the Housing Act 1985, as amended, is wide; it is a house or flat which is occupied by persons who do not form a single household, so there is therefore no simple way of identifying those properties. However, the English house condition survey 1991 estimated the following:

	Number
Bedsits	75,000
Sheltered accommodation & hostels	51,000
Shared houses	220,000
Households with lodgers	213,000
Total	559,000

The information is not complete, however, as other types of accommodation which could fall within the definition of houses in multiple occupation, such as converted owner-occupied flats and bed and breakfast accommodation, are not included. There is no further specific information about hostels.

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many houses in multiple occupation fall under the high risk category in respect of fire safety.

Mr. Curry: Taking high risk to imply large houses in multiple occupation of at least three storeys with a gross floor area of at least 500 sq m, for which local authorities have a mandatory duty to ensure that there are adequate means of escape from fire, research carried out by the Campaign for Bedsit Rights estimated that 8 per cent. of houses in multiple occupation were in this category.

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many people were killed and injured in houses in multiple occupation in (a) 1992–93 and (b) 1993–94 as defined in section 345 of the Housing Act 1985.

Mr. Curry: Statistics are available only for death or injury from fire in England and Wales. The Home Office statistics do not correlate exactly with the definition of houses in multiple occupation in section 345 of the Housing Act 1985. However, the best estimate for multi-occupied houses, excluding shared houses—that is, by students or families taking in lodgers—is as follows:

Deaths from fire in England and Wales, 1987–1992

Year	Multiple Occupancy Houses	All Hotels/ Boarding Houses	All Hostels
1987	80	9	—
1988	72	6	—
1989	77	5	2
1990	61	1	—
1991	44	3	1

Non-Fatal Casualties from Fires in England and Wales, 1987–1992

Year	Multiple Occupancy Houses	All Hotels/ Boarding Houses	All Hostels
1987	1,199	77	40
1988	1,052	125	53
1989	1,100	106	93
1990	1,182	137	59
1991	1,214	118	67
1992	1,320	101	47

Performance Indicators

Mr. William O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what guidance his Department gives to local authorities on the advertising of their performance indicators; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Curry: My Department gives no such guidance. Within the statutory framework including directions issued by the Audit Commission under section 1 of the Local Government Act 1992, the publication of performance indicator information is a matter for individual local authorities. To assist authorities, the Audit Commission has published this year guidance in its booklet "Read All About It".

Mr. William O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his estimate of the costs to local government of the publishing of performance indicators in newspapers.

Mr. Robert B. Jones: As was said at the time that the legislation requiring the publication of performance indicators was sought, the publication is not expected to cause any significant increase in costs to local authorities, and any initial costs incurred by them are likely to be offset by longer-term efficiency savings arising due to performance indicators.

Flooding

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many houses in each water company area in England are at risk of flooding.

Mr. Atkins: That information is not collected centrally either by my Department or by that of my right hon. Friend the Minister for Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, who has policy responsibility for flood defence matters.

Dentists (Pollution)

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made of the pollutionary consequences of dentists washing materials containing mercury and other heavy metals down wash—basins; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Atkins: A provisional estimate of one tonne per year of mercury going to sewer from dental clinics has been suggested on the basis of a limited study of inputs of heavy metals to sewers published in June 1994. Two other on-going research projects, aimed specifically at examining emissions of mercury to the environment, should provide additional information on the possible significance of this source.

High Voltage Power Lines

Mr. William O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what assistance his Department is giving to local authority associations to research into health risks in the development of domestic properties close to high voltage power lines; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what advice he gives to local authorities considering planning applications for development of domestic properties close to high voltage power lines; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Paul Beresford: Responsibility for advising on radiological matters, including exposure to electromagnetic fields from high voltage electricity cables, rests with the National Radiological Protection Board. The NRPB undertakes research and has issued guidance about known health risks with which electricity supply companies comply.

Medomsley Prison

Ms Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has been notified by the Home Office of the objections from Derwentside district council, local residents and the hon. Member of Durham, North West to the proposed secure unit on the site of the former Medomsley prison.

Sir Paul Beresford: No.

Market Testing

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his current calculation of the costs of preparation for market testing in his Department in terms of (a) payments to consultants and (b) other costs.

Sir Paul Beresford: As at 30 June 1994, the total cost of external consultancy fees paid by the Department in preparation for and in support of market testing both internally and in its agencies, amounted to £1·1 million.

Expenditure on other market testing costs for the same period amounted to £2·5 million.

Leeds Development Corporation

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment to whom members of the public should apply for information about the audited financial decisions of the Leeds development corporation.

Sir Paul Beresford: Copies of the annual report and audited financial statements of the Leeds development corporation are available from the chief executive of the corporation, South Point, South Accommodation road, Leeds LS10 1PP.

Retired Caravaners' Association

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what considerations underlay his refusal of the request of the Retired Caravaners' Association to be granted concessions under the Caravan Sites and Control of Development Act 1960.

Mr. Atkins: We grant exemptions under paragraph 4 of schedule 1 of the 1960 Act only to a few large, national organisations with sufficient standing to prove their administrative capability. Following consultation with the Association of District Councils, the Association of County Councils, the Association of Metropolitan Authorities, the National Caravan Council, the British Holiday and Home Parks Association, the Caravan Club, the Camping and Caravaning Club, the Motor Caravaner's Club, the Association of Caravan and Camping Exempted Organisations and the Welsh Office, it was decided that the Retired Caravaners' Association does not meet all the criteria. It is open to the association to apply for membership to the Association of Caravan and Camping Exempted Organisations, which enjoys exemption for extended rallies.

Police Forces

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what considerations underlie the policy of providing a list of standard spending assessments for police forces in England but not Wales.

Mr. Curry: In England, the total of standard spending assessments is sub-divided among the main blocks of services. There is a separate SSA formula for each block. In Wales, the total of SSAs is not at present divided among blocks of services, but the SSAs for county councils in Wales include provision for the police service.

Housing, Basildon

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many (a) council houses and (b) New Town Commission houses have been sold in Basildon since (i) 1983 and (ii) 1979.

Mr. Robert B. Jones: I shall write to the hon. Member.

HEALTH

Staff Cuts

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the ratio of the planned staff cuts at regional health authorities as a percentage of the total number of extra management and administrative staff in the national health service since April 1991.

Mr. Malone: I will write to the hon. Member.

Mr. Malone: I will write to the hon. Member.

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is her estimated financial effect on the national health service of a minimum wage of (a) £3.50 an hour and (b) £4.05 an hour.

Mr. Malone: No such estimate has been made.

NHS Salary Costs

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her answer of 24 October, Official Report, column 451, if she will provide a table listing the total salary costs for (a) general and senior managers, (b) administrative and clerical staff and (c) nursing and midwifery staff in each region for each of the past five years (i) in actual prices and (ii) in 1993 prices.

Mr. Malone: The information available will be placed in the Library. Information for 1993–94 is not available until December 1994.

Quangos

Mr. Grocott: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which former hon. Members of this House have been appointed since 1988 by her Department to quasi-autonomous non-governmental organisations; and if she will list, in each case, the title of the post, the salary, the duration of each appointment and the party which each represented as an hon. Member.

Mr. Sackville: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 20 July 1993, Official Report, column 110 with the following additions:

Dr. Clive Froggatt

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if she will list the dates on which she has met Dr. Clive Froggatt of Chelthenham since her appointment as Secretary of State for Health;

(2) in what capacities Dr. Clive Froggatt of Cheltenham has provided advice to the NHS Executive, the Department of Health or to Health Ministers personally; and whether he was paid for this advice;

(3) what official committees of the NHS Executive or the Department of Health, Dr. Clive Froggatt is, or has been, a member; and what dates he served on them.

Mr. Sackville: There is no record of Dr. Clive Froggatt serving on any official committees of the national health service executive or the Department of Health.

Dr. Froggatt has on occasion given unpaid advice to successive Health Ministers. The dates when such advice was given are not recorded.

Remand (Juveniles)

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many juveniles have been remanded in prison due to lack of secure accommodation in the last five years for which figures are available.

Mr. Bowis: This information is not available centrally.

Secure Accommodation

Mr. Cyril D. Townsend: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when there will be sufficient secure accommodation for juvenile offenders in Greater London.

Mr. Bowis: The provision of secure accommodation for young people whom they are looking after, including juvenile offenders, is the responsibility of individual local authorities.

The Government have made capital funds available to build an additional 170 secure places nationally for criminal justice purposes. Sixteen of those places are to be provided within Greater London by the London borough of Southwark. London boroughs may also have access to additional places being planned by authorities around London, including a new 16—place unit by Essex county council.

Departmental Property

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what properties are owned or leased by her Department for the use of Ministers; what was the total running cost for each property for the latest year available broken down into (a) furniture and fittings, (b) maintenance, (c) staffing, including the number of butlers, cooks and housekeepers, (d) food and hospitality and (e) other costs; what is the estimated value of each property; and how many times in the latest year the property was stayed in overnight by a Minister.

Mr. Sackville: The Department does not own or lease properties for the use of Ministers. The only departmental accommodation used by Ministers is their offices in Richmond house, Whitehall which are provided for their official duties.

Patients

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her answer of 24 October, Official Report, column 449, if she will itemise, by family health service authority, the number of patients removed from general practitioner's lists during each of the last five years.

Mr. Malone: Information for all family health services authorities is available only for the year 1992–93 and will be placed in the Library. Data for 1993–94 are being collected. General practitioners have always had the right, subject to necessary safeguards, to remove patients from their list without giving a reason. Patients also have the right to withdraw from a doctor's list without giving reasons.

Public Investment Projects

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if she will list those public investment projects within her Department's responsibility which have attracted private capital and which have been commenced since November 1993;

(2) how much private capital has been invested in public investment projects within her Department's responsibility since the 1992 autumn statement.

Mr. Sackville: Since the private finance initiative was launched in November 1992, 35 projects have been approved, each with a capital value of £1 million or over. These would bring in private sector capital worth over £90 million to the national health service. Details of the 35 projects are available in the Library.

No information is available on projects with a capital value below £1 million because they do not need central approval.

Information on which projects have been commenced since November 1993 is not available. The information in the Library shows the current status of projects.

Hospital for Tropical Diseases

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what response she has made to the request from the Hospital for Tropical Diseases that it should move to facilities under the control of the University College hospital trust; and when she expects a decision to be finalised.

Mr. Sackville: The Hospital for Tropical Diseases is a constituent part of University College London hospitals national health service trust. Proposals by the trust to relocate the services of the Hospital for Tropical Diseases to the Middlesex and University College hospitals have been considered by the North Thames regional office of the NHS Executive. It has been decided, in agreement with the trust, to postpone the proposed move of the hospital pending the outcome of the option appraisal for the whole trust.

Obsessive Compulsive Disorders

Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what treatment units there are operating in the NHS to treat obsessive compulsive disorders.

Mr. Bowis: Treatment for those suffering from obsessive compulsive disorders is available as part of the provision of general mental health services.

Spencer Stuart Consultants

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many contracts her Department or Government agencies responsible to her Department have entered into with Spencer Stuart consultants in the last two years.

Mr. Sackville: We have no record of any contracts between the Department of Health or its agencies and Spencer Stuart consultants.

Disciplinary Suspensions

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) doctors, (b) nurses and (c) consultants (i) are currently suspended on pay from their duties for disciplinary reasons, (ii) were suspended on pay in each of the last five years from their duties for disciplinary reasons and (iii) were suspended before their case was heard for (a) less than three months, (b) between three and six months, (c) between six and 12 months and (d) over 12 months; and what is and was the cost of (i) and (ii) including temporary or locum replacement.

Mr. Malone: We do not collect such information. Decisions, including possible suspensions, rest with the employing authority.

Health Commissions

Mr. Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the new health commissions that have been formed as a result of the merger of health authorities and family health service authorities.

Mr. Malone: None.

Hospital Consultants

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her answer of 9 May, Official Report, columns 1–2, if she will update the table on vacant hospital consultant posts.

Mr. Malone: The information is shown in the table.

Because these are consultant vacancies notified to the Department as at 30 September of each year, they may not fairly reflect the trend for the number of vacancies over the year as a whole.

Vacant hospital consultant posts by specialty group England—30 September 1989–1993

Children of God

Mr. Frank Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he will take to deal with the situation discovered in relation to the organisation entitled the Children of God; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Bowis: I will write to the hon. Member.

Vaccinations

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the medical reason for the abortion from which foetal tissue was obtained from which vaccine was originally derived for vaccinating children against measles and rubella; when that abortion took place; what was the age of the foetus when aborted; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Sackville: The cell line in which the vaccine is grown was derived from cells from a single foetus. The termination was carried out in 1966 in a national health service hospital. The foetus was aged 14 weeks. The termination was carried out for psychiatric reasons. Those details were published in "Nature" in 1970, volume 227, pages 168–170. The rubella virus used in the vaccine was isolated from a foetus terminated in the 1960s in the United States 17 days after the mother contracted confirmed rubella. Copies of the publication are available in the Library.

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what additional action she is taking to persuade the maximum numbers of parents in the United Kingdom to consent to their children being vaccinated against measles and rubella; what action is being taken to allay religious reservations about the origins of the vaccine used in the current vaccination programme; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Sackville: The Health Education Authority has produced an information leaflet with a consent form for parents. Television advertisements and other forms of media have also been used to provide advice and information about the immunisation campaign. This has included advertisements in the ethnic press and on ethnic radio programmes. The Department has been working with leaders of all the faith communities to make available information about the production of rubella vaccine and the public health benefits of immunisation. The chief medical officer met representatives of the various faith communities to discuss the campaign on 1 November; a copy of the press statement released following that meeting has been placed in the Library. We hope that parents of all faiths will be able to participate fully.

Homeopathic Medicines

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what is her policy in respect of directive 92/73/EEC regulating medicinal homeopathic products;

(2) what is the Government's timescale for implementing directive 91/73/EEC.

Mr. Sackville: Regulations fully implementing directive 92/73/EEC came into force on 14 February 1994. The principal effect of those regulations was to establish a simplified registration scheme for homeopathic medicinal products, thereby extending the opportunities for the marketing of such products in the United Kingdom. Currently marketed products were not affected.

Electromagnetic Fields

Mr. William O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what assessment her Department has made into the existence of any link between child leukaemia and electromagnetic fields;

(2) what research her Department has conducted into any link between electromagnetic fields and health problems;

(3) if she will make a statement on the health implications of living close to major sources of electricity supply with particular reference to overhead power cables and electricity sub-stations.

Mr. Sackville: The National Radiological Protection Board and the Committee on Medical Aspects of Radiation in the Environment have considered epidemiological studies and laboratory research and concluded that they do not establish that exposure to electromagnetic fields causes cancer. Some epidemiological studies have reported associations between electromagnetic fields and some types of cancer. However, the significance of an epidemiological study depends, among other things, on the strength of the association, the presence of a dose-response relationship, supporting experimental evidence and a credible biological explanation. These tests for causality are not satisfied for the link between electromagnetic fields and cancer. The two bodies have not recommended the adoption of a policy of prudent avoidance of electromagnetic fields on the basis of present evidence. The position is being kept under review.

The Department is contributing to the funding of the United Kingdom childhood cancer study organised by the United Kingdom Co-ordinating Committee for Cancer Research. The study, which is well under way, is examining the possible influence of a number of agents, including electromagnetic fields on the incidence of childhood cancer.

The Department also provides funding to the National Radiological Protection Board which undertakes a programme of research into the effects on health of electromagnetic radiation. This includes sources of electromagnetic radiation such as power lines and electrical equipment.

Asthma

Ms Gordon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many recorded cases of asthma in children of school age there were for each year from 1979 to 1993.

Mr. Sackville: It is estimated that between 4 and 6 per cent. of children suffer from asthma sufficiently seriously to require medical supervision. Numbers of hospital in-patient cases of children suffering from asthma are available from hospital episode statistics for the years shown in the table. Figures for earlier years are not available.

Finished consultant episodes—ordinary admissions and day cases—in which asthma was the main diagnosis for the five to 18 age group, England

	Number
1988—89	27,547
1989—90	23,175
1990—91	20,536
1991—92	22,965

Pay Scales

Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if she will give details of the current pay scales for consultants;

(2) if she will give details of the current pay scales for doctors;

(3) if she will give details of the current pay scales for nurses.

Mr. Malone: The revised pay rates for nurses and those for hospital medical and dental staff and doctors in public health medicine and the community health service effective from 1 April 1994 were announced in Advance Letters (NM)3/94 and (MD)1/94 respectively. Copies of those letters will be placed in the Library.

Bull Bars

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many cyclists injured in collision with vehicles fitted with bull bars were admitted to hospital in the last 12 months.

Mr. Sackville: This information is not available centrally.

Parliamentary Questions

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on how many occasions in the present Session she has answered parliamentary questions with the single word "no".

Mr. Sackville: A search of POLIS shows that of a total 5,312 parliamentary questions answered by the Department up to 2 November this session, 24 received an answer with the single word "no"—0·45 per cent.

NHS Trusts

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list the date of appointment, salary and previous post of each of the chief executives of the NHS trusts in England.

Mr. Malone: The information is not available centrally.

Foetal Material

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if she will list all the medicines, vaccines and treatments which have been developed from the cells of aborted foetuses or use foetal material as part of their ingredients.

Mr. Sackville: Foetal cells have been used to generate cell lines subsequently used in the manufacture of rabies, rubella, hepatitis A and polio vaccines.

The polio vaccine mainly used in the United Kingdom however, was not developed or manufactured using foetal material.

We are not aware of any other licensed medicinal products where their manufacture would have involved the use of such material.

Performance-related Pay

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her answer of 1 November, what proportion of the responses she has received have supported the proposal to introduce performance-related pay into the national health service.

Mr. Malone: I will write to the hon. Member.

Market Testing

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is her current calculation of the costs of preparation for market testing in her Department in terms of (a) payments to consultants and (b) other costs.

Mr. Sackville: For the period 1 April 1992 to 30 September 1993, the Department market tested activities valued at £19 million with annual savings of £3·5 million. The one-off consultancy and other costs for this period amounted to £409,118 and £263,000 respectively.

The value of services market tested in the period 1 October 1993 to 30 September 1994 was £25 million. Related savings are not yet available. The consultancy and other costs for the period to 30 June 1994 - the latest available - were £213,731 and £81,000 respectively.

Pelvic Cancer

Mr. Miller: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her answer of 21 October, Official Report, column 393, what audit she undertook of those people who were treated for pelvic cancer; and if she will publish the results.

Mr. Sackville: The Department is not undertaking an audit of those people who were treated for pelvic cancer.

The Department commissioned an audit of breast cases because they were all suffering from the same cancer and had similar radiotherapy. Patients who had pelvic radiotherapy had different cancers and underwent different techniques of radiotherapy. It is easier to detect common features between members of the first group than between members of the second. For that reason, we have commenced an audit of women exhibiting adverse effects following breast radiotherapy.

Surveys

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to her answer of 28 October, Official Report, column 863, if she will place in the Library copies of the hospital league tables—qualitative, patient's charter literature research and hospital league tables qualitative, post publication, surveys.

Mr. Malone: I will write to the hon. Member.

Herbal Medicines

Mr. Hain: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what consultations she undertook with organisations representing consumers and practitioners of herbal medicines prior to drafting the proposed Medicines for Human Use (Marketing Authorisations, Pharmacovigilance and Related Matters) Regulations;

(2) if she will make a statement on the future availability of herbal medicines; and if she will indicate in particular the effect upon that availability of the implementation of (a) the proposed Medicines for Human Use (Marketing Authorisations, Pharmacovigilance and Related Matters) Regulations and (b) the implementation of any other European directives which have been agreed, which are being negotiated, or which are expected in the near future;

(3) which sections of the Medicines Acts currently exempt certain herbal medicines from the requirement to obtain a product licence; by which procedure products are exempted; and if she will take steps to ensure that such exemptions are sustained when she brings forward for consideration and implementation (a) the proposed Medicines for Human Use (Marketing Authorisations, Pharmacovigilance and Related Matters) Regulations and (b) the implementation of any other European directives which have been agreed, which are being negotiated, or which are expected in the near future.

Mr. Sackville: I will write to the hon. Member.

Mr. Treddinnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if she will list those herbal products which are currently exempt from the requirement for a product licence under the terms of Medicines Acts and which would become unavailable should the European Community bring forward harmonisation procedures following the acceptance of the provisions of the proposed Medicines for Human Use (Marketing Authorisations, Pharmacovigilance and Related Matters) Regulations;

(2) if she will list those organisations specialising in herbal medicines which were consulted about the proposed Medicines for Human Use (Marketing Authorisations, Pharmacovigilance and Related Matters) Regulations; and what steps she is taking to ensure that such organisations are routinely consulted on future occasions;

(3) what information she has concerning the number of individuals in the United Kingdom who currently use herbal medicines; what information she has to suggest that there is a serious health risk posed by the use of such medicines; upon what basis she believes legislation in this area is necessary; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what consultations she undertook with right hon. and hon. Members prior to the drafting of the proposed Medicines for Human Use (Marketing Authorisations, Pharmacovigilance and Related Matters) Regulations; and what steps she will take to ensure that such consultations are undertaken in future;

(2) what information she currently has about the average cost associated with the supply of all necessary information and research data by a manufacturer in connection with an application to the Medicines Control Agency for a product licence; and what assessment she has made of the implications of such expenses for the suppliers of herbal medicines should such products be brought within the scope of the licensing regime either through the implementation of the proposed Medicines for Human Use (Marketing Authorisations, Pharmacovigilance and Related Matters) Regulations, or subsequent harmonisation moves by the European Community.

(3) what steps she intends to take to guarantee the availability of herbal medicines within the United Kingdom should the European Community bring forward moves towards harmonisation in the availability of such products following the implementation of the proposed Medicines for Human Use (Marketing Authorisations,Pharmacovigilance and Related Matters) Regulations, and the implementation of any other European directives which have been agreed, which are being negotiated, or which are expected in the near future.

Mr. Sackville: I will write to my hon. Friends.

National Blood Authority

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what procedure is being adopted for consideration of the National Blood Authority's reorganisation proposals; when the National Blood Authority will complete its consideration of the responses to the consultation; and when she will consider their recommendations.

Mr. Sackville: The National Blood Authority is undertaking a national consultation on its proposals which ends on 11 November. The results will be carefully considered before decisions are made. The detailed procedure and timescale for assessing the results is under consideration.

Children in Hospital

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations she has received since January 1993 on the "Too Dear to Visit" campaign and the issue of parents visiting their sick children in hospital; how many letters she has received from (a) parents of sick children, (b) professionals, (c) voluntary organisations and (d) hon. Members; and if she will make a statement.

Mr. Sackville: We have received some 98 letters from hon. Members who have enclosed a copy of one prepared by the organisers of the "Too Dear to Visit" campaign and forwarded by constituents. The organisers have also written directly to the Department. In addition we have received a small number of letters from members of the public in support of the campaign. We have carefully considered these representations in the light of current provisions for parents to visit their children in hospital. There are no plans to extend these arrangements.

TREASURY

Public Appointments

Mrs. Maddock: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what percentage of public appointments made by his Department were held by women at the most recent date for which figures are available.

Mr. Nelson: The Chancellor of the Exchequer has some responsibility for making or approving 97 public appointments, 23 per cent. of which are held by women, as shown in "Public Bodies 1993", including the Royal Mint.

In addition to the above appointments, he also has some responsibility for making or approving a further 229 public appointments which are not shown in "Public Bodies". A total of 17 per cent. of these appointments are currently held by women.

Quangos

Mr. Grocott: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer which former hon. Members of this House have been appointed since 1988 by his Department to quasi-autonomous non-governmental organisations; and if he will list, in each case, the title of the post, the salary, the duration of the appointment and the party which each represented as an hon. Member.

Mr. Nelson: Since 1988 the Treasury has appointed two former Members of the House to quasi non-governmental organisations. Lord Stewartby, a Conservative, was appointed to the Securities and Investments board in December 1993 for a period of two years at a salary of £13,500 per annum. Dr. Oonagh McDonald —Labour—was appointed to the Securities and Investments board in December 1993 for a period of three years at a salary of £13,500 per annum.

Airports Customs Officers

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many United Kingdom airports receiving scheduled flights from abroad do not have permanent, full-time customs staff stationed at the airport.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: There are six United Kingdom airports receiving scheduled flights from abroad at which there are no permanent, full-time customs staff stationed.

BSkyB

Mr. Allen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what tax consequences and payments to public funds accrue from the sale of 10 per cent. of BSkyB shares.

Sir George Young: The normal rules of confidentiality prevent me commenting on the affairs of particular taxpayers.

Public Expenditure

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proportion of gross national product were representing (a) gross United Kingdom contributions to the European Community, (b) direct expenditure by Government Departments, (c) expenditure by executive next steps agencies, or other self-accounting units within the public sector and (d) Her Majesty's Government grants to local authorities, at the latest available date; and on what value of gross national product these proportions are calculated.

Mr. Aitken: The table shows figures for expenditure as a percentage of gross domestic product for the financial year 1993–94, the latest year for which final outturn figures are available.

	Percentage of GDP
Gross EC contributions	1·3
Central government's own expenditure[1]	28·4
Central government grants to local authorities[2]	8·8

Notes:

[1] Government Departments' and other central Government bodies' expenditure within the control total excluding net EC contributions and including cyclical social security.

[2] Excludes credit approvals.

The figures are based on a gross domestic product figure of £630 billion. It is the Government's usual practice to use gross domestic product in preference to gross national product when comparing Government expenditure aggregates with total economy expenditure.

Separate information on the expenditure by next steps executive agencies is available in individual Departments' annual departmental reports. Information on the expenditure of non-departmental public bodies can be found in the Cabinet Office publication "Public Bodies".

Income Tax

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what was the tax take, in each year since 1990–91 of (a) the top 1 per cent., (b) the top 5 per cent., (c) the top 10 per cent., (d) the bottom 70 per cent., (e) the bottom 10 per cent. of taxpayers and (g) all taxpayers;

(2) what was the percentage of total income, in each year since 1990–91, received by (a) the top 1 per cent., (b) the top 5 per cent., (c) the top 10 per cent., (d) the bottom 70 per cent. and (e) the bottom 10 per cent. of taxpayers;

(3) what was (a) the total income, (b) the average income and (c) the earned income, in each year since 1990–91, of (i) the top 1 per cent., (ii) the top 5 per cent., (iii) the top 10 per cent., (iv) the bottom 70 per cent, (v) the bottom 10 per cent. of taxpayers and (vi) in all taxpayers;

(4) what was the percentage of the tax take, in each year since 1990–91, from (a) the top 1 per cent., (b) the top 5 per cent., (c) the top 10 per cent., (d) the bottom 70 per cent. and (e) the bottom 10 per cent. of taxpayers.

Sir George Young: Estimates are given in the table.

Spencer Stuart Consultants

Mr. Byers: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many contracts his Department or Government agencies responsible to his Department have entered into with Spencer Stuart consultants in the last two years.

Mr. Nelson: I regret that I cannot answer substantively before Parliament is prorogued. I will, however, write to the hon. Member.

Departmental Property

Mr. Byers: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what properties are owned or leased by his Department for the use of Ministers; what was the total running cost for each property for the latest year available broken down into (a) furniture and fittings, (b) maintenance, (c) staffing, including the number of butlers, cooks and housekeepers, (d) food and hospitality and (e) other costs; what is the estimated value of each property; and how many times in the latest year the property was stayed in overnight by a Minister.

Mr. Nelson: The Treasury neither owns nor leases buildings for the use of Ministers.

Lloyd's Names

Mr. Hain: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what is the Inland Revenue's estimate of tax relief since 1988 for Lloyd's names; and if he will make a statement;

(2) on what basis tax relief will be given to Lloyd's names for the years of account since 1988; and if he will make a statement.

Sir George Young: Lloyd's names are traders under general law and tax legislation follows this. Accordingly, trading losses incurred by Lloyd's names are eligible for relief on the same lines as those of other traders: Lloyd's trading losses of any year can be set against other tradeable income of the same tax year or of the previous year, or can be carried forward and set against Lloyd's trading profits of later years.

Changes from the 1991–92 year or assessment enabling trading losses to be set against capital gains apply to all traders, including Lloyd's names.

Information on tax relief is not centrally available. Income tax and capital gains tax repaid to Lloyd's underwriters by the underwriters unit of Inland Revenue in each year to 5 April since 1988–89 is shown in the following table. The figures cover refunds of tax made over a range of earlier years, and include any repayment supplement attracted by the tax refunded. For comparison purposes, the table also shows the tax charged on initial assessments made during each year on underwriting profits and gains, including estimated assessments.

Fiscal Year	Total tax repaid £ million	Total tax assessed £ million
1988–89	157·7	157·3
1989–90	118·2	308·9
1990–91	91·0	228·2
1991–92	126·7	101·8
1992–93	386·6	10·3
1993–94	479·1	3·7

Public Investment Projects

Mr. Betts: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much private capital has been invested in public investment projects since the 1992 autumn statement.

Sir George Young: Nearly £8 billion by the end of 1994–95, including about £500 million under the private finance initiative.

Bank Accounts

Mr. Madden: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what guidance has been issued to the clearing banks by the Bank of England concerning personal and business bank accounts held by Iraqi nationals resident in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nelson: The Bank of England issued a notice on 7 August 1990, and supplements on 25 August, 3 September and 13 September 1990, which detailed the administrative arrangements for blocking personal and business accounts held in the United Kingdom by Iraqi nationals. Further guidance is given to individual banks on application to the sanctions emergency unit at the Bank of England.

Copies of the Bank notice and the three supplements are being placed in the Library.

Mortgage Tax Relief

Mr. Ron Davies.: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many households in Wales receive mortgage tax relief; and at what total cost to the Exchequer.

Sir George Young: It is estimated that 450,000 married couples and single people receive mortgage interest relief in Wales in 1994–95 at a cost to the Exchequer of £130 million. The estimates are based on the regional distribution of mortgages shown by the 1993 family expenditure survey applied to the United Kingdom total estimates for 1994–95.

Black Economy

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made about the growth in the black economy since 1979.

Sir George Young: It is not possible to make a reliable assessment.

VAT

Mr. Bowden: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what the increase in inflation for the year to September 1994 would have been if VAT on fuel at 8 per cent. had not been introduced in April.

Mr. Nelson: The extension of VAT to domestic fuel and power is estimated to have added just under 0·4 per cent. to the retail prices index since April 1994.

Market Testing

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his current calculation of the costs of preparation for market testing in his Department in terms of (a) payments to consultants and (b) other costs.

Mr. Nelson: Expenditure to date by the Treasury on payments to external consultants for work related to market testing amounts to £141,675. Other costs of £59,400 have also been incurred.

Loans (Taxation)

Mr. Carrington: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how the Inland Revenue taxes loans which replace cheap or interest-free loans provided to employees by their employer.

Sir George Young: Cheap or interest-free loans provided by employers are taxable benefits in kind. At present under, the technical rules introduced in 1976 to prevent avoidance, any loan which replaces a cheap or interest-free loan provided by an employer is also taxable, unless the replacement loan qualifies for exemption.

Some employers would like to stop providing cheap loans to staff. They want to do so by transferring their staff's existing loans to subsidiaries of commercial lenders set up for the purpose of giving replacement loans in such circumstances. However, the replacement loans from the subsidiary companies, which are on arm's length terms, could still be taxable. They would not be exempt as "commercial loans" because the subsidiary companies do not lend to the public.

In order to remove a possible obstacle to the provision of replacement loans to employees, we intend to propose legislation in the next Finance Bill. This would replace the rule which makes all replacement loans potentially taxable by new rules which focus more precisely on the potential for tax avoidance. The new rules would allow the subsidiary companies to provide replacement loans on arm's length terms without the replacement loans being taxable. We intend that this provision should apply from 6 April 1995.

The Inland Revenue is making available today a draft clause which would implement these changes. A copy of the draft clause will be placed in the Library of the House of Commons.

Tax Statistics

Mr. Betts: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will update his answer to the hon. Member for Glasgow, Garscadden (Mr. Dewar) of 25 February 1993, Official Report, columns 682-84, on the tax liabilities of taxpayers in different income bands, giving figures for 1994–95 and estimates for 1995–96 based on the assumption of statutory indexation and including measures already announced in the 1993 budgets.

Sir George Young [holding answer 2 November 1994]: Latest estimates of the average reductions in income tax and national insurance liabilities in 1994–95 and 1995–96 assuming statutory indexation and inclusion of measures already announced, compared with liabilities under an indexed 1987–88 regime are in the table. An equivalent assumption has been made about indexation of the national insurance regime for 1995–96. The 1987–88 income tax regime has been indexed to 1994–95 and 1995–96 levels by reference to the statutory formula and allowing for the effect of the independent taxation of husbands and wives.

For the purpose of the calculations the indexed regime of 1987–88 has been applied directly to the income bases of 1994–95 and 1995–96. In practice, retention of the 1987–88 regime, indexed as appropriate, for the intervening years would have led to changes in the income base.

Mr. Betts: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will add to the table in his answer to the hon. Member for Glasgow, Garscadden (Mr. Dewar) of 3 November 1993, Official Report, columns 245-56, estimating the tax liabilities in 1995–96 for the given income ranges showing the effects of all tax changes including those announced in 1993 budgets and including both indirect taxation and intermediate taxation.

Sir George Young [holding answer October 1994]: The impact of indirect and intermediate taxation depends on individual spending patterns and the effect of indirect and intermediate taxes on prices.

Mr. Betts: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will update the information provided in the Treasury's tax ready reckoner and tax reliefs on the basis of the September retail prices index.

Sir George Young [holding answer 2 November 1994]: Updated information for tables 2 to 6, and part of table 7, is as follows. Figures for the rest of table 7, as well as tables 8 to 10, have not been revised as these are not dependent on the September retail prices index.

Notes:

[1] The values of these allowances were announced in the November 1993 Budget. The additional £330 for taxpayers aged 65 or over ensures that they lose no more from the restriction of the married couple's allowance to 15 per cent. than taxpayers aged under 65.

[2] Primarily for single parents.

[3] If the total income, less allowable deductions, of a taxpayer aged 65 or over exceeds this limit, the age-related allowances are reduced by £1 for each £2 of income over the limit until the basic levels of the personal and married couple's allowances are reached.

[4] Higher rate income tax is payable on income (less those allowances and reliefs that are allowed at the higher rate) in excess of the basic rate limit.

[1] The estimates are rounded. The extent of rounding reflects the desire to avoid undue compounding of its effects when numbers are pro-rated, rather than the accuracy of the estimates. The figures include consequential effects on the yield of capital gains tax. Changes are assumed to take effect from April 1995.

[2] Including the effects of the changes on receipts of ACT and on consequential liability to mainstream corporation tax.

[3] In last year's Ready Reckoner it was assumed that a change in the lower rate would affect the married couple's allowance and related allowances and mortgage interest relief. These allowances and mortgage interest relief have since been restricted to 15 per cent. with effect from April 1995 and will not consequentially reduce the effects of a change in the lower rate.

Mr. Betts: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will update his answer to the hon. Member for Glasgow, Garscadden (Mr. Dewar) of 1 November 1993, Official Report, column 20, to provide similar estimates of the burden of direct and indirect taxes for 1995–96 based on the assumption of statutory indexation and including measures already announced in the 1993 budgets.

Sir George Young [holding answer 2 November 1994]: The burden of direct and indirect taxes for 1995–96 will depend on the levels of earnings in that year. The impact of pre-announced Budget measures averaged over all households will be about £3 a week in 1995–96.

Mr. Betts: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will update the answer to the hon. Member for Glasgow, Garscadden (Mr. Dewar) of 3 November 1993, Official Report, column 254, to include estimates for taxing child benefit for 1995–96 based on the assumption of statutory indexation and measures already announced in the 1993 budgets; and if he will include estimates for the effect on revenues if child benefits was taxed at the higher rate only.

Sir George Young [holding answer 2 November 1994]: Were child benefit to be taxed on the assumption given the yield would be:

		Yield in a full year (£ million) 1994–95	1995–96
Child benefit taxed as:
Father's or lone mothers income	—All taxpayers	1,200	1,300
	—40 per cent. taxpayers only	300	300
Mother's or lone father's income	—All taxpayers	650	700
	—40 per cent. taxpayers only	40	40

The estimates for 1995–96 are based on the assumption that child benefit will be increased in line with the September retail prices index.

Duties

Mr. Betts: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what would be the impact on the retail prices index of a (a) 3 per cent., (b) 5 per cent. and (c) 10 per cent. increase in duties on (i) beer and cider, (ii) wine, (iii) spirits, (iv) tobacco, (v) petrol, (vi) diesel and (vii) vehicle excise duty.

Mr. Heatcoat-Amory [holding answer 2 November 1994]: The table shows the impact on the RPI, excluding mortgage interest payments of various duty increases.

Value Added Tax

Mr. Betts: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what would be the effect on Treasury revenue in 1995–96 and in a full year of extending value added tax at (a) 8 per cent. (b) 17·5 per cent. to all those zero-rated, giving figures separately for each item.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory [holding answer 2 November 1994]: The Treasury publication "Tax Ready Reckoner and Tax Reliefs" shows the expected cost of zero rating items currently zero-rated in 1994–95. It is possible to derive an estimated revenue gain from taxing these items at both 8 per cent. and 17·5 per cent. These figures make no allowance for behavioural changes.

Economic Developments

Mr. Denham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will press the International Monetary Fund board of directors to release the document, entitled "Recent Economic Developments".

Mr. Nelson [holding answer 2 November 1994]: The IMF executive board decided on 11 July 1994 that, subject to the consent of the member concerned, "Recent Economic Developments" documents should be published. Since that date there have been no "Recent Economic Developments" documents on the United Kingdom.

Public Sector Borrowing Requirements

Mr. Betts: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the reasons for the difference between the forecast public sector borrowing requirement for 1994–95 contained in table 2·1 of the Treasury's 1994 summer economic forecast and the earlier forecast for the same financial year contained in the March 1991 Financial Statement and Budget Report; and if he will estimate how much of the difference was due to (a) discretionary changes to public expenditure plans, taxes or other receipts, (b) changes resulting from errors in forecasting the level of out-put, (c) changes resulting from errors in forecasting the rate of inflation, (d) errors in forecasting debt interest and (e) other errors.

Mr. Aitken: I regret that I cannot answer substantively before Parliament is prorogued. I will, however, write to the hon. Member.

Family Expenditure

Mr. Betts: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the average weekly expenditure in 1997–98 and 1996–97 of (a) all households, (b) families with children, (c) non-retired households and (d) retired households, on domestic fuel, showing separately for 1995-96 the extra expenditure as a result of VAT at 17·5 per cent.

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory [holding answer 2 November 1994]: The table shows figures for 1993 based on the family expenditure survey, the most recent data available. Making projections for 1996–97 and 1997—98 would require hypothetical assumptions on the development of earnings, the distribution of income between household types and future energy prices.

	Average weekly expenditure 1993 £	Extra expenditure from 17½ per cent. VAT £
All households	13·24	1·81
Families with children	15·25	2·08
Non retired households	13·40	1·83
Retired households	11·03	1·51

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Prosecution (Immunity)

Mr. Allason: To ask the Attorney-General how many people are the subject of an immunity from prosecution; and if he will name them.

The Attorney-General: The term "immunities" is variously used to signify specific assurances given by prosecuting authorities that an offender will not be prosecuted for a particular offence or offences as well as the assurance which may be implied when a prosecuting authority concludes that the public interest is being served by using an individual who may have played some part in a crime as a witness rather than prosecuting that individual.

The term may also be used to describe assurances given to an individual that answers to questions given before a particular tribunal —for example, a public inquiry—will not be used in evidence against that person; albeit a prosecution may still be brought if evidence from other sources is available and sufficient to justify the institution of proceedings.

No central record of "immunities" is maintained.

Departmental Property

Mr. Byers: To ask the Attorney-General what properties are owned or leased by his Department for the use of Ministers; what was the total running cost for each property for the latest year available broken down into (a) furniture and fittings, (b) maintenance, (c) staffing, including the number of butlers, cooks and housekeepers, (d) food and hospitality and (e) other costs; what is the estimated value of each property; and how many times in the latest year the property was stayed in overnight by a Minister.

The Attorney-General: Excluding departmental offices, no such properties are owned or leased by the Departments for which I am responsible.

Spencer Stuart Consultants

Mr. Byers: To ask the Attorney-General how many contracts his Department or Government agencies responsible to his Department have entered into with Spencer Stuart consultants in the last two years.

The Attorney-General: None.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Broadcasting and Media

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what is his latest estimate of (a) the export value of United Kingdom broadcasters programmes and (b) the value of imports into the United Kingdom of foreign programmes.

Mr. Nelson: I have been asked to reply.

In 1993, exports and imports by United Kingdom television companies were £113 million and £228 million respectively. These figures include the making of television programmes and the buying and selling of completed programmes.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what representations he made to and what assessment he has made of the decision of the European Parliament regarding cross–media ownership; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dorrell: My Department is aware of the view of the European Parliament, which is likely to be reflected in the European Commission's forthcoming communication on pluralism and media concentrations.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what contact his Department has had with the European Commission Council of Ministers arising from the European Parliament's decision in January to request draft legislation from Commissioner Vanni d' Archirapi on diversification of media ownership.

Mr. Dorrell: There has been no discussion within the Culture Council on the issue of media ownership. The Industry/Telecommunications Council on 28 September 1994 noted the European Commission's response to the Bangemann group report on the Information Society, which included reference to media concentration.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what response his Department has made to the EU Commission's communication on the information Society in respect of European regulation of media concentrations.

Mr. Dorrell: The European Commission's communication on the Information Society indicated that the Commission will shortly present a communication to the Council and Parliament on the follow-up to the Green Paper on pluralism and media concentration in the internal market. I shall consider any response once the communication is available.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will list the research papers produced by his Department or commissioned from consultants in the last year on matters which fall under the scope of the broadcasting policy and media divisions of his Department.

Mr. Dorrell: "Setting the level of the television licence fee", a report by management consultants, Touche Ross, was published on 4 November 1993. No other research papers have been produced in the last year in the areas falling within the scope of my Department's broadcasting policy and media divisions.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage when the franchises for the regional television companies are to be re-auctioned; and what amendments to the proceedings he will introduce.

Mr. Dorrell: The channel 3 licences which came into force on 1 January 1993 are valid for ten years. An application for renewal may be made by the current licence holder any time after six years from the start of the licence. The terms of any renewal will be set by the Independent Television Commission. I have no plans to amend the procedures.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage when he last met representatives of the ITN network; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dorrell: I met Michael Green, who is the chairman of ITN, on 6 October and discussed a number of broadcasting issues.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what response his Department has made to the European Green Paper on pluralism and media 1992; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dorrell: My Department has discussed the Green Paper with officials from the European Commission on a number of occasions. I shall consider any response to the Commission's forthcoming communication on this matter once the communication is available.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what plans he has to change the ownership rules for ITV franchises; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dorrell: The ownership rules for all broadcasters, including the ITV franchises, are being considered as part of the Government's review of cross-media ownership. An announcement about the outcome will be made once the Government have determined the way ahead.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage (1) what is his Department's policy towards extending the diversity of ownership of the press and broadcasting media;

(2) what is his Department's policy on the extension to broadcasting of the existing laws of libel and obscenity as apply to other media;

(3) what was the income received by Her Majesty's Government from each of the independent television companies for the latest year for which figures are available; and if he will list separately the levy, the annual bid price and other sources of revenue.

Mr. Dorrell: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of the letter in the Libraries of the House.

Public Appointments

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will list the quangos to which his Department is due to make appointments over the next year.

Mr. Dorrell: My Department will be making appointments to the following non-departmental public bodies over the next 12 months;

The Arts Council of England
The British Film Institute
The Geffrye Museum
The British Library Board
The British Tourist Authority
The Broadcasting Complaints Commission
The Broadcasting Standards Council
The Crafts Council
English Heritage
The English Tourist Board
The Football Licensing Authority
Greater Manchester Museum of Science and Industry
The Horniman Museum
The National Film Development Fund
The National Film and Television School
National Museums and Galleries on Merseyside
The Public Lending Right Advisory Committee
The Royal Armouries
The Sports Council
The Theatres Trust

In addition, I will be making appointments to the new Library and Information Commission and to a new advisory council which will take over the statutory functions of the Library and Information Services Council (England).

Depending on when they are established, I may also be making appointments to the new United Kingdom and English Sports Councils.

Television Licence Fee

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what is Her Majesty's Government's policy on index linking the television licence fee to maintain its value; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dorrell: As announced by my predecessor on 4 November 1993, Official Report, columns 309–10, the Government's policy, in the light of a study by independent management consultants, Touche Ross, is to link increases in the television licence fee to the retail prices index for the remaining years of the BBC's current royal charter, that is, until the end of 1996.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what would be the cost of free television licences to all pensioners.

Mr. Dorrell: If free television licences were made available to all pensioners, regardless of their means, the cost to the BBC, in terms of lost licence fee revenue, is currently estimated at £510 million.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what representations his Department has made on the subject of concessionary television licences in warden-aided accommodation being available to some and not to others; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dorrell: As indicated in the White Paper "The Future of the BBC", published on 6 July 1994, the Government have considered the possibility of reviewing the concessionary television licence scheme, as recommended by the National Heritage Select Committee. We have, however concluded that any attempt to remove the perceived anomalies of the scheme would most likely only have the effect of creating fresh ones. The Government therefore have no plans for any changes in the concessionary regulations.

Privacy

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will make a statement on his Department's policy on the proper balance between investigative journalism and protection of private individuals from intrusion and harassment.

Mr. Dorrell: The Government's conclusion on this matter will be set out in our response to the National Heritage Select Committee's report on privacy and media intrusion.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage (1) if he will make it his policy to incorporate a public interest defence into any forthcoming legislation on privacy;

(2) when he expects to publish a White Paper on privacy and the media arising from the Lord Chancellor's review and the Calcutt report; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dorrel: The Government's conclusions on the need for fresh legislation to protect privacy will be set out in our response to the National Heritage Select Committee's report on privacy and media intrusion. I cannot yet say when that will be published.

Press

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage (1) what is his Department's assessment of the effectiveness of the Press Complaints Commission;

(2) what is his Department's policy on the establishment of a right to free speech and a free press; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dorrell: The Government's conclusions on the effectiveness of the Press Complaints Commission, and on the proper balance between the right to privacy and the freedom of the press, will be set out in our response to the National Heritage Select Committee's report on privacy and media intrusion.

Information Super-highways

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what interest his Department has in the development of information super-highways; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dorrell: My Department's interest is in contributing to the development of broadcasting, telecommunications and computer networks by providing a regulatory structure for broadcasting that recognises the needs of both consumers and industry.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what his Department's policy is on the European Commission's proposals for a European information super-highway; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dorrell: The European Commission has stimulated an interesting debate on these matters, to which my Department continues to contribute. We remain of the view that it is primarily for the market to determine how to proceed and to grasp the opportunities that the new technologies and continuing liberalisation of world markets will bring.

Tourism

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will list his official engagements for 27 October and also those of his Parliamentary Under-Secretary with responsibility for tourism.

Mr. Dorrell: On 27 October, I held a number of departmental meetings, attended Cabinet and flew to the US on private business immediately thereafter. My hon. Friend, the Under-Secretary of State, Viscount Astor, also held departmental meetings and attended a British hospitality association dinner.

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will list all independent consultants or firms who have been awarded contracts to carry out tourism-related work for each of the last five years, specifying which body was responsible for the appointment, the dates of appointment, the name of the consultant or firm, the value of the contract and the subject of the consultant's work.

Mr. Dorrell: I shall write to the hon. Member and place a copy of the letter in the Libraries of the House.

Media Ownership

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage in what form his Department keeps records of who owns (a) newspapers and (b) television stations and what his statistics indicate about the concentration of ownership.

Mr. Dorrell: Ownership concentrations within the broadcasting sector must conform to the limits prescribed by the Broadcasting Act 1990. Information about the ownership of broadcasters is collected by the Independent Television Commission in accordance with its responsibilities outlined in chapter 1 of part 1 of the Act. My Department does not itself regularly collect ownership information about the newspaper industry.

Departmental Advice

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will list the occasions on which his Department has expressed a view on the advisability of any item or programme being published or broadcast.

Mr. Dorrell: The Department of National Heritage is not consulted in advance about individual publications or programmes.

Mr. Sproat: My Department neither leases nor owns any property for the personal use of Ministers.

Ms Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what co-ordination he has with other Government Departments in order to facilitate the teaching of team sports in schools.

Mr. Sproat: The Government are currently considering ways of enhancing the position of team sports in schools. An announcement will be made in due course. All interested Departments are contributing to the review.

Sports Council

Ms Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what is the current salary of the chairman and other officers of the Sports Council; and if they are on performance-related pay.

Mr. Sproat: The salary of the chairman of the Sports Council is published annually in the Cabinet Office's publication "Public Bodies", and is currently £20,546. This is reviewed in line with the recommendations of the Senior Salaries Review Body, subject to satisfactory performance. It is not practice to publish the salaries of individual employees. Performance-related pay has however been introduced in line with the arrangements which apply in the civil service.

Ms Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage when he expects to announce that changes to the Sports Council have been implemented.

Mr. Sproat: As I announced to the House on 8 July, Official Report, columns 584-86, I expect the restructuring of the Sports Council to be achieved during the next financial year.

Ms Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage on what basis the Sports Council will continue to fund the English School Sports Association and its members.

Ms Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will make a statement on the availability of non-vocational qualifications in sport; and if he will list those that will be available by 1 January 1995.

Mr. Sproat: Sport NVQs are currently available in playwork—levels 2, 3 and 4—sport and recreation—level 1—sport and recreation—facility operations—level 2, sport and recreation (development) (level 3), sport and recreation (outdoor education) (level 3), sport and recreation (supervision) (level 3), sport and recreation management (facilities) (level 4) and sport and recreation management (sports development) (level 4). It is likely that by 1 January 1995, coaching NVQs will be available in swimming, windsurfing, football, karate, basketball, fitness, hockey and lawn tennis.

Ms Hoey: To ask the Secretary for National Heritage which sports will be funded under the reorganised Sports Council.

Mr. Sproat: My right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for National Heritage, met members of the Sports Council on an informal basis on 12 September and discussed a range of issues with them. I met the council on 17 October to hear its views on our proposals for the future structure and focus of the new United Kingdom and English Sports councils.

European Football Championships

Ms Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what role he plans for the football supporters associations in the planning of the European football championship.

Mr. Sproat: Responsibility for planning the 1996 European Football Championship rests with the tournament organisers, the Football Association. The FA, together with the Football league, the FA Premier league and the Football trust hold regular meetings with the football supporter organisations to discuss, amongst other things, the arrangements for the championship.

Ms Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if he will make a statement on co-operation with the Football Association in the planning and running of the 1996 European Football Championship.

Mr. Sproat: The Department of National Heritage has worked closely with the Football Association from the start, both in securing the tournament for England, and on promotional and diplomatic matters. My officials are involved in the detailed arrangements for the championship through representation, with observer status, on the FA's central co-ordinating committee, and a separate FA working group on security and safety.

National Lottery

Ms Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage when he expects the start up costs for the National Lottery to be repaid.

Mr. Sproat: The national lottery distribution fund—NLDF—will receive its first payment from proceeds of the national lottery on Tuesday 22 November 1994. The setting up and administration costs of the Office of the National Lottery, and any administrative costs incurred by the distributing bodies in preparing to process applications for national lottery grants, including sums to be repaid to the Treasury in respect of set up costs already paid for from public funds, will be drawn down from the NLDF as required after that date.

The setting up costs of Camelot Group plc are a commercial operations matter. I have asked the director-general of the national lottery to write to the hon. Member on this point and to place copies of his response in the Library of the House.

We have also emphasised the importance of people with disabilities being able to benefit from national lottery funds.

Cash and Running Costs Limit

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what proposals there are to change the 1994–95 cash limit or running costs limit in respect of security and intelligence services.

Mr. Robert G. Hughes: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply my right hon Friend the Prime Minister gave to the hon. Member for Plymouth, Sutton (Mr. Streeter) on 1 November 1994, Official Report, column 1096-97.

Next Steps Agencies

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will publish the list of (a) the chief executives of the next steps agencies together with their salaries and (b) the salaries of the civil servants who were responsible for similar functions prior to the establishment of those agencies.

Nolan Committee

Sir Nicholas Fairbairn: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what are the estimated costs of the proposed new body to investigate standards in public life in respect of (a) premises, (b) hon. Members and (c) civil servants supporting it; and how many civil servants will be involved.

Mr. David Hunt: Arrangements for the setting up and operation of the standing committee on standards in public life are not yet completed.

Sir Nicholas Fairbairn: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how and by whom the members of the proposed new body or standards in public life have been chosen; and how and why a particular judge was chosen as chairman.

Mr. David Hunt: My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister appointed the chairman of the committee on standards in public life after consultation with the Lord Chancellor; he appointed the members of the committee following consultation with Lord Nolan, and with the leader of the Opposition and the leader of the Liberal Democratic party.

Sir Nicholas Fairbairn: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what remit the proposed body on standards in public life will have in Scotland; and if he will make a statement.

> "to advise the Head of the Home Civil Service on steps to be taken to improve the representation in senior management positions of people of ethnic minority origin and people with disabilities, with particular reference to recruitment, career development, retention and other factors identified by the Panel as relevant; and to make recommendations".

The panel first met on Monday 12 September. It is expected to meet regularly over the next few months and plans to submit a report of its findings and recommendations to Sir Robin Butler by April 1995.

Official Report

Mr. Forman: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will arrange for the Official Report, to be distributed free to public libraries and sold to the public at the marginal cost after official demand has been met.

Mr. Robert G. Hughes: Under long-standing arrangements aimed at facilitating public access to Government information, local authority libraries already qualify for a considerable discount on all HMSO publications, including the Official Report.

Market research on the prospects for increasing the distribution of the Official Report has recently been undertaken by MORI on behalf of HMSO. The findings are currently under consideration.

Charterline

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what was the final total cost to public funds of the Charterline, broken down into component costs; and what was the final total of calls it received.

It also sends out a list of departmental contact points from which copies of any of the 40 follow-up charters can be ordered:

Departmental Property

Mr. Byers: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what properties are owned or leased by his Department for the use of Ministers; what was the total running cost for each property for the latest year available broken down into (a) furniture and fittings, (b) maintenance, (c) staffing, including the number of butlers, cooks and housekeepers, (d) food and hospitality and (e) other costs; what is the estimated value of each property; and how many times in the latest year the property was stayed in by a Minister.

Mr. Robert G. Hughes: Excluding departmental office buildings, we have no such properties for the use of Ministers.

TRANSPORT

Road Schemes

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list all the European Community directives that have to be taken into consideration in the preparations for new road schemes.

Mr. Watts: This is an operational matter for the Highways Agency. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. Harry Cohen, dated 3 November 1994:

John Watts, the Minister for Railways and Roads, has asked me to write to you about your question in the House on which European Community directives are taken into consideration in the preparations for the new road schemes.

The Highways Agency takes into account all relevant European Community Directives that have been implemented in United Kingdom law in the preparation of new Trunk Road schemes.

M42 (Planning Blight)

Mr. Mills: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he will act to purchase those houses suffering from planning blight as a result of his proposals to widen the M42 in the constituency of Meriden; and if he will make a statement.

(2) if he will reconsider his proposal for widening the M42 by two lanes each side in the constituency of Meriden; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Watts: These questions are operational matters for the Highways Agency. I have asked the chief executive to write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. Iain Mills, dated 3 November 1994:

The Minister of State for Railways and Roads has asked me to write to you in response to your Parliamentary Questions about the M42 widening in Meriden since they are operational matters for the Highways Agency.

I can confirm that all properties which fulfil the conditions of the statutory blight legislation will be bought by the Highways Agency. In addition, those properties which satisfy the criteria for discretionary purchase will also be bought. The criteria require that the proposed roadworks should be predicted to have a serious effect on a property, as defined in the criteria and that there should be a case on hardship grounds for acquiring it. Twenty one properties in the vicinity of junction 5 have so far been purchased and other applications are being considered. I understand that Steven Norris has now written to you about enquiries from four of your constituents.

Compensation is also available after construction for depreciation in value of property caused by widening and eligibility for noise insulation will be assessed.

The proposals for the widening were presented to the public earlier this year. This was so that they could express views about the options. The many comments received since then are still being assessed, but will be taken into account by the Secretary of State in deciding on the future progress of the proposals.

Railway Disasters

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what sums were made available from public funds to the relatives of victims in respect of expenses arising for the public inquiries concerning (a) the King's Cross and (b) Clapham railway disasters.

Mr. Watts: I will write to the hon. Member.

Traffic and Parking Control

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to take steps to monitor the effectiveness of traffic control and parking; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norris: Counties, metropolitan districts and London boroughs, as local traffic authorities, are primarily responsible for monitoring the effectiveness of traffic control and parking on all local roads in their areas. My right hon. Friend monitors the effectiveness of the legal framework within which the local traffic authorities must work.

Departmental Property

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what properties are owned or leased by his Department for the use of Ministers; what was the total running cost for each property for the latest year available broken down into (a) furniture and fittings, (b) maintenance, (c) staffing, including the number of butlers, cooks and housekeepers, (d) food and hospitality and (e) other costs; what is the estimated value of each property; and how many times in the latest year the property was stayed in overnight by a Minister.

Mr. Norris: My Department does not own or lease any property for ministerial use as an official residence.

Horse Riding (Safety)

Mr. Michael Spicer: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 31 October, what representations he has received regarding the adequacy of the guidance laid down in the highway code governing the safety clothing and markings for horse riders at night; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norris: We received 34 communications in the last year on road safety for horse-riders. Ascertaining how many of these mentioned conspicuity could be done only at disproportionate expense.

Underground Stations, London

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what report he has received from London Underground Ltd. as to when Westminster underground station will reopen;

(2) what steps he is taking to prevent further disruption of transport services in London following the incidents at Heathrow and Westminster underground stations.

Mr. Norris: The prevention of further disruption of transport services in London following the incidents affecting Heathrow and Westminster underground stations is a matter for the transport operators concerned.

At Heathrow, the British Airports Authority has set up an inquiry into the causes of the Heathrow express project tunnel collapse, and are working with the contractors to secure the continued safe operation of the airport and minimise inconveniences to passengers. London Underground Limited will resume services through the Piccadilly line underground tunnels serving Heathrow terminal 4 as soon as it and the Health and Safety Executive's railway inspectorate have determined that it is safe to do so.

At Westminster, London Underground is taking urgent remedial measures to prevent further incidents associated with the construction works there, and to enable the earliest possible reopening of the station.

Traffic Levels

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will estimate the relationships between changes in traffic and (a) increases in road capacity and (b) economic growth.

Mr. Watts: During the last 15 years, traffic has grown at about one and a half times the rate of growth in gross domestic product. The Department's publication "National Road Traffic Forecast Great Britain (1989)" describes the close relationship between national traffic growth and national economic growth.

The relationship between traffic growth and increases in road capacity is a complex subject, which has been studied by the Department's standing advisory committee on trunk road assessment. The report will be published with the Government's response in due course.

Investment Projects

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he will list those public investment projects within his Department's responsibility which have attracted private capital and which have been commenced since November 1993;

(2) how much private capital has been invested in public investment projects within his Department's responsibility since the 1992 autumn statement.

Mr. Norris: The following such projects have been commenced since November 1993

Ashford International Passenger Station (£40 million)

London Underground Track Maintenance £0·5 million)

London Underground Information Technology Services (£10 million)

Between the 1992 autumn statement and the end of the current financial year, an estimated £370 million of private capital will have been invested, with forward commitments for a further £1·1 billion.

Additional schemes with an estimated total value of some £3·5 billion are currently subject to competition.

Cyclists (Safety)

Mr. Michael Spicer: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 31 October, what representations he has received regarding the adequacy of the regulations and the guidance contained in the highway code in respect of lamps, reflectors and safety clothing for cyclists riding at night; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norris: In the past 12 months I have replied to seven representations about the adequacy of the Road Vehicle Lighting Regulations 1989. In addition, the Department receives a large number of representations on bicycle safety. Ascertaining how many of these mentioned conspicuity could be done only at disproportionate expense.

Spencer Stuart Consultants

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many contracts his Department or Government agencies responsible to his Department have entered into with Spencer Stuart consultants in last two years.

Mr. Norris: None.

Road Casualties

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he will announce the next sets of road casualty figures.

Mr. Norris: Third quarter 1994 provisional estimates will be announced on 12 January 1995.

Bus Lanes

Mr. Butcher: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what studies he (a) has conducted and (b) plans to conduct into the speed at which buses complete their journeys using bus-only lanes compared to journey completion times for buses without the benefit of bus-only lanes on same route.

Mr. Norris: We are monitoring several schemes to see what effect they have on bus journey times. Reports will be published in due course.

Congestion and Pollution

Mr. Butcher: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will conduct a study of the extent to which bus-only lanes cause increased traffic congestion and pollution.

Mr. Norris: I have no plans to do so at present.

Mr. Butcher: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made as to whether stationary traffic causes more pollution than moving traffic in urban areas.

Mr. Norris: Research is regularly undertaken by the Transport Research Laboratory and other laboratories to assess the emissions characteristics of motor vehicles operating under a variety of driving conditions. This shows that below an optimum speed of some 40 to 50 miles per hour, the slower the speed the greater the level of emissions from the vehicle. The higher density of stationary or very slow moving traffic compared with free moving traffic will also affect overall levels of emissions.

Mr. Butcher: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will conduct a review of the extent to which left-turn only and right-turn only lanes have slowed down traffic flow through junctions.

Mr. Norris: Traffic management is a matter for the local highway authority. Right—and left—turn only lanes are necessary in some cases for the safe and efficient flow of traffic through junctions and we have no evidence that they are in general being used inappropriately. I do not currently plan to review their use.

Mr. Butcher: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the impact of reductions in queuing at junctions on traffic congestion and urban pollution.

Mr. Norris: Delays and queues at junctions are the primary cause of traffic congestion in urban areas, thus reducing queuing at junctions has a direct effect on congestion. Where road and junction schemes in urban areas are proposed to reduce congestion, the impact of reductions in queuing at junctions is assessed as a matter of course.

Stop-start traffic generates more exhaust gases per vehicle than smoothly flowing traffic. A reduction in queuing can be expected to reduce local air pollution levels.

Traffic Lights

Mr. Butcher: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made on whether traffic light phasing at junctions where congestion occurs regularly is examined and, if necessary, re-phased frequently enough.

Mr. Norris: The timing of traffic lights is for local highway authorities, who make their own arrangements for assessment. In London, reviews are normally on a three year cycle, to allow for changes in traffic densities. But modern systems of urban traffic control where they are installed are self-adapting and so do not need regular review.

Mr. Butcher: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will visit the United States of America to examine the effect on urban traffic flow of permitting traffic to turn right through red lights if the driver is satisfied that there is no oncoming traffic entering the junction from the left.

Mr. Norris: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Transport will take every opportunity to listen to United States experience on a range of topics including all aspects of urban traffic flow.

Cones Hotline

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what have been the costs to date of advertising and running the cones hotline.

Mr. Watts: This is an operational matter for the Highways Agency, I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Bollards

Mr. Butcher: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) how many traffic bollards have been installed in the most recent 12-month period of which figures are available.

(2) what information he has on how many bollards are currently in place.

Mr. Norris: The Department is not responsible for monitoring the installation of bollards on local authority roads and no information is held centrally about the number installed in any 12-month period. Research carried out for the Department is 1993 suggests that there are approximately 131,000 bollard-mounted traffic signs in England.

Road Markings

Mr. Butcher: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether visual amenity is part of the planning consideration for the acceptability of white lines or yellow lines on all roads other than trunk roads.

Mr. Norris: DOT guidance to local authorities advises that a lighter shade of yellow may be used for regulatory road markings in environmentally sensitive areas.

Mr. Butcher: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received from the Department of the Environment regarding the extent of white lines and yellow lines on country lanes, minor roads and suburban roads.

Mr. Norris: We are engaged in ongoing discussions with other interested Departments, including DOE, on the use of road markings in environmentally sensitive areas, but we have not received any representations on this particular issue.

Traffic Lights

Mr. Butcher: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many traffic lights there are in England and Wales currently; and how many there were in (a) 1984, (b) 1974 and (c) 1964.

Mr. Norris: The information is not available in the form requested.

Motorways

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he will make a further statement on the implementation of his policy on the introduction of private sector management of motorways;

(2) if he will make a further statement on the implementation of his policy on motorway tolling;

(3) what response he has received from the private sector to his policy on electronic charging for motorway use and the private management of motorways.

Mr. Watts: Policy on these matters was set out by the then Secretary of State for Transport on 2 December 1993 at column 650.

Some 30 consortia comprising over 70 companies have submitted proposals for electronic tolling systems for the programme of research, development and trials announced in that statement. We are now assessing these in order to select a limited number for test-track and on-road trials next year.

The statement also announced our intention to identify projects under which the private sector would design, build, finance and operate roads for which they would receive payment from Government in relation to use. Four such DBFO projects have been identified for the first contracts, two of which will involve private sector management of motorways. Pre-qualifying bids have been received from 17 consortia comprising over 70 firms.

Railway Rolling Stock

Mr. Gunnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what arrangements currently exist for the refurbishment of railway rolling stock; and when he expects the arrangements needed under the Railways Act 1993 to be in place.

Mr. Watts: Refurbishment of British Rails's passenger rolling-stock is the responsibility, within BR, of the three rolling-stock leasing companies.

Vehicle Excise Duty

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much revenue was raised by vehicle excise duty in each of the last 10 years.

Mr. Norris: The net receipts after allowing for refunds and other adjustments were:

Year	Vehicle Excise Duty £ millions
1984–85	2,264
1985–86	2,426
1986–87	2,520
1987–88	2,598
1988–89	2,767
1989–90	2,948
1990–91	2,923
1991–92	2,931
1992–93	3,225
1993–94	3,655

Operation Seafire

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the times at which, during exercise Operation Seafire on 17 October off the west Wales coast (a) a call was received from Stena Sea Lynx for helicopter assistance and firefighters, (b) a request was made by HM Coastguard for helicopter assistance from RAF Chivenor and RAF Valley, (c) helicopters took off from RAF Chivenor and RAF Valley, (d) a helicopter from RAF Chivenor landed in West Glamorgan to pick up firefighters, (e) the helicopter took off from West Glamorgan, (f) the helicopter arrived over Stena Sea Lynx, (g) firefighters began to be lowered on to Stena Sea Lynx and (h) lowering firefighters was completed.

Mr. Norris: During exercise Seafire on 10 October:

a) 0625
b) 0628
c) RAF Chivenor at 0649 and RAF Valley at 0658 and 0706
d) 0705
e) 0710
f) 0730
g) 0749
h) not recorded.

Road (West Yorkshire)

Mr. William O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he will consider taking no further action on road development schemes in west Yorkshire until the Secretary of State for Health publishes the results of all current studies on air pollution; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what consultations his Department is involved in with the Department of Health on the impact of road schemes on west Yorkshire on the health of communities and in particular the health of children; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Watts: These are operational matters for the Highways Agency, I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Market Testing

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is his current calculation of the costs of preparation for market testing in his Department in terms of (a) payments to consultants and (b) other costs.

Mr. Norris: Payments to consultants for work on those items in the Department's 1992–93 and 1993–94 competing for quality programmes completed by 30 June 1994 totalled £1·815 million. Expenditure on the Department's own market testing staff amounted to £0·268 million up to 30 June 1994.

Channel Tunnel Rail Link

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received regarding compensation for people living alongside rail lines being used by channel tunnel passenger and freight services who are affected by increased noise and vibration; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Watts: A number of representations have been received. The Land Compensation Act 1973 provides for compensation to be paid in certain circumstances when the value of property is reduced as a result of physical factors such as noise and vibration arising from the use of new or altered public works or where there has been a change of use in respect of the works - other than an intensification of an existing use. It is for people who believe they have claims for compensation to submit them to the responsible authority, in this case Railtrack, for consideration. Further information is given in a guide recently produced by Railtrack for householders who may be considering claims. A copy is being placed in the Library.

Kidderminster Bypass

Mr. Hawksley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will publish the inspectors' report into the Kidderminster, Blakedown and Hagley bypass.

Mr. Watts: The report is currently being considered by the Secretaries of State for the Environment and for Transport. It will be published at the same time as their decision on the orders for the scheme.

Bull Bars

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many reported accidents in the last 12 months involving cyclists resulted in injury following collision with vehicles fitted with bull bars.

Mr. Norris: The information requested is not available.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what analysis he has made of research into the severity of injuries to cyclists from vehicles fitted with bull bars.

Mr. Norris: The Department is currently carrying out research into accidents involving vehicles with bull bars to determine whether or not they are causing increased injuries to cyclists as well as pedestrians.

Trunk Roads

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he will publish the report of the Standing Advisory Committee on Trunk Road Assessment.

Mr. Watts: We will publish our response, together with the report, in due course.

Accident Statistics

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he will estimate the total reduction in costs of fatal and serious accident casualties in each year since 1986 at the 1993 values used in the table C.I of the 18th report of the Royal Commission on Environmental Pollution; and if he will give the cumulative total;

(2) if he will estimate the effect on fatal and serious injuries of the national roads programme spending.

Mr. Norris: I will write to my hon. Friend.

Lorries

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he will include piggyback lorries in the legislation allowing heavier lorries to be used in combined rail-road journeys;

(2) if he will start work immediately on the upgrading of a rail route from Scotland to the channel tunnel to allow piggyback traffic.

(3) if he will make it his policy to press for standardisation of dimensions of containers, rail gauges and related matters;

(4) what plans he has to increase the attractiveness of railways as an element in an inter-modal transport system.

(5) what plans he has to support the Piggyback Consortium plans as outlined in its final report published in April.

Mr. Watts: I will write to the hon. Member.

Traffic

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he intends to publish the report on the generation of traffic submitted to him by SACTRA.

Mr. Watts: I will publish my response, together with the report, in due course.

Highway Contracts

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many highway contracts with an estimated value of £1 million or more have been advertised in the Official Journal of the European Communities, by each EU country, in each of the last three years.

Mr. Watts [holding answer 2 November 1994]: This is an operational matter for the Highways Agency. I have asked the chief executive to write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. Anthony Steen, dated 3 November 1994:

You put down a Parliamentary Question for answer by the Secretary of State about the number of highways contracts worth in excess of £1 million advertised in the Official Journal of the EU.

As the information requested relates to operational matters for which the Highways Agency is now responsible, as promised by the Minister, John Watts, I am replying to your Question.

However, I regret I am unable to provide the information you requested.

The Highways Agency voluntarily advertise all highways works contracts with an estimated value of £1 million or more in the Official Journal. The EU threshold for compulsory advertisement is those worth ECU 5 million (currently equivalent to about £3·7 million) or more. The Agency does not keep a central record of the number of such advertisements and the information cannot be provided without incurring disproportionate cost.

Regarding similar advertisements placed by other EU countries, it is not the Agency's policy to monitor these and I regret, therefore, that this information is not available within the Agency.

M11 Link

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport whether the proposed M11 link road's environmental barriers along all its route comply with the highest standard in his Department's design guide for environmental barriers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norris: This is an operational matter for the Highways Agency. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. Harry Cohen, dated 3 November 1994:

The Minister for Transport in London has asked me to write to you in response to your Parliamentary Question about the design of environmental barriers on the A12 Hackney Wick to M11 Link Road since this is an operational matter for the Highways Agency.

The design of the barriers which it is intended to provide on the Link Road complies with the Department of Transport's current standards which are contained in the Specification for Highway Works and Technical Memorandum H14/76.

The design guide to which you refer has been widely circulated in draft but will not emerge in its final form until the end of this year. Clearly it will be possible to take account fully of its recommendations only in future road designs, and there will be no requirement to revise existing designs or schemes retrospectively. However, we shall strive to provide the highest standard of environmental protection on the Link Road consistent with budget and programme.

Trans-European Road Network

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what changes in the Trans-European road network he has recommended to the European Commission as part of its 1995 review of the network; and if he will publish a map of the proposed TERN.

Mr. Watts: The amendments the Government have proposed to the European Commission as part of the review of the Trans-European road network were announced by my right hon. Friend the Member for Norfolk, South (Mr. MacGregor) on 30 June. They are listed in my Department's press notice of that date, to which was attached a map of the proposed network in the United Kingdom. A copy is in the Library.

SCOTLAND

Hunting

Mr. Meale: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many licences were issued in 1992, 1993 and to date in 1994 to allow hunting on Forestry Commission land; what was the total income from such licences; and whether these were open to public tender.

Sir Hector Monro: The Forestry Commission issued 73 permits to allow hunting on its land in 1992, 78 permits in 1993 and 81 permits in 1994. The Commission makes no charge for hunting and permits are not subject to public tender.

Mr. Meale: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) how many licences to shoot birds and game on Forestry Commission land were issued in 1992, 1993 and 1994; to which bodies or organisations; and what was the total income from such licences;

(2) which hunts have licences to hunt on Forestry Commission land; and in which areas.

Sir Hector Monro: I shall write to hon. Member as soon as possible and place a copy of the signed letter in the Libraries of the House.

Public Appointments

Mrs. Maddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what percentage of public appointments made by his Department were held by women at the most recent date for which figures are available.

Mr. Lang: I shall write to hon. Member as soon as possible and place a copy of the signed letter in the Libraries of the House.

Badgers

Housing

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many new homes were completed by local authorities in Wales in 1978–79 and 1993–94; and how many he expects will be completed in 1994–95 and 1995–96.

Forecasts of completions in 1994–95 and 1995–96 are not available.

Mr. Redwood: All claims, other than those on which there are queries, or quota problems, have now been passed for payment.

Public Appointments

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) how many public appointments his predecessor was (a) responsible for making in 1979 or which (b) required his approval; and if he will divide these figures into (i) appointments to executive bodies, (ii) appointments to advisory bodies and (iii) other appointments;

(2) if he will list the bodies to which he or his predecessor was responsible for appointing or where appointment required his or his predecessor's approval in (a) 1979 and (b) today; and if he will list the total funding from the Welsh Office for these bodies in (a) cash prices and (b) current prices;

(3) if he will list the bodies that his Department funded (a) in 1979 and (b) today; and if he will list the total funding from the Welsh Office for these bodies in (a) cash prices and (b) current prices.

Mr. Redwood: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my reply in the Library of the House.

Departmental Running Costs

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the total running costs each of his Department in (a) 1979 and (b) today in cash and current prices.

Mr. Redwood: The available information is as follows:

Welsh Office running costs

	Cash terms £ million	1994–95 prices £ million
1979–80	17·8	45·0
1994–95	68·3	68·3

The increase in running costs reflects the assumption of additional functions by the Welsh Office, for example, further responsibilities for industry, higher education and training and agricultural grants. In addition, the figures for 1994–95 reflect superannuation charges, which were not included in the data for 1979–80.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish a list showing the total number of employees in his Department broken down by grade for (a) 1979 and (b) today; and what is the corresponding pay bill in each case in cash prices and current prices.

Mr. Redwood: The total number of permanent staff employed by my Department in December 1979, broken down by grade is:

Grade	Total Number Employed
Grade 1	1
Grade 2	2
Grade 3 and Equivalents	13
Grade 4 and Equivalents	3
Grade 5 and Equivalents	55
Grade 6 and Equivalents	98
Grade 7 and Equivalents	159
SEO and Equivalents	150
HEO and Equivalents	219
EO and Equivalents	412
AO and Equivalents	643

Grade	Total Number Employed
AA and Equivalents	537
Industrial Staff	227
Fast Streamers	11

The corresponding pay bill in this year was £14,900,000. This equates to £37,000,000 in current prices.

The total number of permanent staff employed by my Department on 1 November 1994, broken down by grade is:

Grade	Total number employed
Grade 2	2
Grade 3 and Equivalents	12
Grade 4 and Equivalents	7
Grade 5 and Equivalents	49
Grade 6 and Equivalents	33
Grade 7 and Equivalents	178
SEO and Equivalents	145
HEO and Equivalents	300
EO and Equivalents	505
AO and Equivalents	603
AA and Equivalents	450
Industrial Staff	142
Fast Streamers	21

The corresponding paybill for this year is £47,805,000.

The staffing and paybill figures for 1979 include details for ancient monuments and schools inspection. The figures for 1994 include Cadw but not the Office of Her Majesty's Chief Inspector. The 1994 paybill figures include superannuation charges.

The Welsh Office employs 54 fewer staff of grades one to seven and SEO than in 1979, and 84 fewer of all grades. During this period it has also taken on extra functions.

Investment Projects

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if he will list those public investment projects within his Department's responsibility which have attracted private capital and which have been commenced since November 1993;

(2) how much private capital has been invested in public investment projects within his Department's responsibility since the 1992 autumn statement.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Private finance forms a significant part of many programmes. The Welsh Office and its sponsored bodies levered in £400,000,000 of private funding in 1993–94 and this is forecast to increase to £407,000,000 in 1994–95. It is not practicable to list individual projects.

Mr. Richards: This information is not held centrally.

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many contracts his Department or Government agencies responsible to his Department have entered into with Spencer Stuart consultants in the last two years.

Mr. Redwood: The report confirmed the health authority's previous assessment of the fire and clinical risks at Cardiff Royal infirmary, which had been shared with the director of the health department. These risks have driven the work to find alternative arrangements and for this reason I was keen that the public should see the full report. My decision announced on 20 October to agree in principle the authority's strategic plan clears the way to tackle the risks.

Market Testing

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his current calculation of the costs of preparation for market testing in his Department in terms of (a) payments to consultants and (b) other costs.

Mr. Redwood: The costs of supporting my Department's programme of market testing in the period 1 April 1992 to 30 June 1994 are as follows: (a) consultancy support £246,000 and (b) other costs £691,000.

On average market testing to date results in savings of one fifth in the costs being tested.

Morriston Hospital

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he expects to make an announcement in relation to the contract for operating the Morriston hospital cardiac surgery unit.

Mr. Redwood: I hope to make a decision early next year.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list each occasion on which he or his Department met each of the bidders for the contract tendered for the Morriston hospital cardiac surgery unit; how many of the meetings took place (a) before and (b) after the submission of the tender; and in each case whether the initiative for the meeting took place at (i) his or (ii) the bidders' request.

Mr. Redwood: I have not met any of the bidders since the competitive tendering process began. I will write to the hon. Member.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales on what date the completed tenders were first received from each of the bidders for the Morriston hospital cardiac surgery unit; and on what date he received any completed re-tendering exercises from any of the bidders.

Mr. Redwood: The tenders were received by the project board's deadline of 15 June, 1994. There has been no re-tendering.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement in relation to the tendering procedure for the Morriston hospital cardiac surgery unit; and if he will give details of rules and regulations pertaining to variations to the terms of the contract under the tender procedure, to the prohibitions and exclusions relating to re-tendering (a) prior to and (b) after the closing date specified, and contacts between bidders and his Department in relation to re-tendering procedures.

Mr. Redwood: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my reply in the Library of the House.

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if he will make a statement on the reasons for not publishing standard spending assessments for police authorities in Wales;

(2) if he will now publish the standard spending assessments for police forces in Wales (a) for 1994–95 and (b) for each of the previous 10 years.

Mr. Gwilym Jones: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to him on 4 July at column 91.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to the answer by the Secretary of State for Health of 17 October, Official Report, column 131, what consultations he has had with South Glamorgan health authority concerning the provision of accommodation for the national TB reference laboratory; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood: I have had no formal consultations with South Glamorgan health authority on accommodation for this unit. Management of the unit is a matter for the Public Health Laboratory Service board.

Between 1988 and 1992 officials at the Welsh Office convened discussions between South Glamorgan health authority, the PHLS and the University of Wales college of medicine about the implementation of the recommendations of the Evans report into microbiology services, including the TB reference laboratory, in south Glamorgan.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many community dentists were employed in each family health service authority area of Wales in the last year for which figures are available.

The Green Paper "Improving NHS Dentistry" restates the Government's commitment to the NHS and its intention to strengthen the safety net function of the community dental service.

National Botanic Garden

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 17 October, Official Report, column 79, what consultants were commissioned by his Department to consider the feasibility of establishing a national botanic garden for Wales; by what method the consultants were chosen; and if he will give the approximate capital cost within which they have been asked to work.

Mr. Redwood: The consultants commissioned by my Department to consider the feasibility of a national botanic garden for Wales are ERES, Castle buildings, Womanby street, Cardiff CF1 2RG. They were chosen following a competitive tendering procedure. No approximation of the capital costs of the project were given to the consultants.

Ethnic Health Projects

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to the answer given by the Secretary of State for Health of 17 October, Official Report, column 135, what proposals he has to extend funding in Wales for experimental projects comparable to those being offered by the NHS ethnic health unit in England.

Mr. Redwood: I have no proposals at present.

Departmental Property

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what properties are owned or leased by his Department for the use of Ministers; what was the total running cost for each property for the latest year available broken down into (a) furniture and fittings, (b) maintenance, (c) staffing, including the number of butlers, cooks and housekeepers, (d) food and hospitality and (e) other costs; what is the estimated value of each property; and how many times in the latest year the property was stayed in overnight by a Minister.

Mr. Redwood: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my reply in the Library of the House.

Countryside Council

Sir Wyn Roberts: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) whether he will review the functions of the Countryside Council for Wales with a view to those functions being transferred to local and national Government;

(2) what plans he has to reduce overhead costs of the Countryside Council for Wales.

Mr. Redwood: A recently conducted review of the work of the Council has indicated that there could be scope for elected bodies to play an increased role in the delivery of certain of its present functions. My Department will now be discussing these proposals, and the general issue of running costs, with the council.

Quangos

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the total expenditure on quangos, training and enterprise councils and the national health service in Wales by his Department for each year since 1979, in cash and 1994–95 prices.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 27 October 1994]: The information requested is shown in the following table:

General Practitioner Lists

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many people in the mid Glamorgan family health services authority area have been removed from the GP's list and how many have been (a) under 18 years, (b) women over 60 years, (c) men over 65 years of age, (d) registered disabled people, (e) in receipt of repeat prescriptions and (f) recorded as having been previously removed from a GP's list in each of the last four years.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 1 November 1994]: This information is not available in the form requested.

I understand that some 50,858 patients were removed from GP's lists in mid Glamorgan during 1993, according to data held by the mid Glamorgan family health services authority. A further 33,904 patients were removed between 1 January and 31 August 1994.

The most common reasons for the removal of 99 per cent. of these patients were moving home, emigration, adoption, death and the retirement of the GP.

In 1993 only 0.8 per cent. or 407 patients were deregistered at the request of the GP. They all had the opportunity to register with another GP. We do not keep records by age in the Welsh Office.

Dental Services

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of the adequacy of NHS dental provision in Newtown, Llanidloes, Machynlleth and Dolgellau; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 1 November 1994]: It is for health authorities to assess the adequacy of NHS dental services in their locality.

Family health services authorities are encouraged to seek my permission to employ salaried dentists in areas where there is a shortfall in service provision. Gwynedd and Powys family health services authorities have applied for permission to employ salaried dentists in their areas. As a result, the Gwynedd family health services authority has permission to employ four salaried dentists, to be deployed at such centres as that authority judges best to ensure the availability of general dental services, and the Powys authority has permission to employ a salaried dentist at Builth Wells.

Powys family health services authority has since made further applications to employ salaried dentists at Machynlleth and Newtown. With the agreement of the authority, the Machynlleth application is being held in abeyance pending the result of a Welsh Office sponsored advertising campaign to attract further independent practitioners to the area. The application in respect of Newtown is presently under consideration. Newtown has recently been declared a designated area under the dental location incentive scheme. My Department will provide the funding for those who qualify for the grants which are now available for dentists wishing to set up or expand practices in the Newtown area.

On 20 October my Department provided additional funding of £50,000 to the Gwynedd health authority to purchase additional treatment sessions to support the community dental service safety net role.

European Regional Funds

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will give details of European Union expenditure in Wales on an (a) gross and (b) net basis; and if he will place a copy in the Library of such recent documentation on the above calculation as he has available.

Mr. Redwood [holding answer 20 October 1994]: Expenditure figures in Wales are available from the structural funds on a gross basis only. Information on other areas of European Union expenditure is not available for Wales. Neither is it possible to present this information on a net basis.

I will place in the Library of the House a copy of the information available.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Security Officers

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the number of (a) registered and (b) non-registered security officers currently operating in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: There is no central system of registration for security officers.

Merseyside Police

Mr. Kilfoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what projections he has made of the future budget needs of Merseyside police.

Mr. Maclean: The budget requirement for the Merseyside police is a matter for the Merseyside police authority.

Mr. John Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he next plans to meet representatives of Merseyside police authority to discuss their funding requirements for 1995–96.

Mr. Maclean: A letter setting out the basis of the revised new police funding formula will be going to the Merseyside police authority shortly. Detailed proposals for central Government support for the Merseyside police in 1995–96 will be available shortly after the Budget on 29 November.

Neighbourhood Security Patrols

Mr. Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, what recent discussions he has had about the possibility of vetting and regulating firms offering neighbourhood security patrols.

Mr. Maclean: Home Office Ministers and officials have frequent contacts with the police and the private security industry in which the question of regulation can arise. Last year we published a Green Paper on the arrangements for criminal record checks on people seeking employment in sensitive areas. We intend to publish a white paper setting out the results of our review in the new year.

Firearms

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what were 1993's figures for crimes of violence where firearms were used.

Mr. Howard: In 1993, 8,777 notifiable offences of violence were recorded by the police in England and Wales in which firearms were reported to have been used.

Seventy four involved offences of homicide, 1,047 attempted murder and other acts, including wounding, endangering life, 1,738 other offences of violence against the person and 5,918 of robbery.

Immigration

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what importance he attaches to retaining the system of intergovernmental co-operation on European immigration issues.

Mr. Howard: The Government attach the utmost importance to the continuation of the present intergovernmental arrangements under title VI of the treaty on European Union.

Wheel Clamping

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he now expects to announce the Government's response to his Department's consultation on wheel clamping.

Mr. Maclean: As soon as possible.

Closed Circuit Television

Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he will provide finance to local authorities to facilitate the implementation of the CCTV system in town centre locations.

Mr. Howard: Last month I announced a new challenge competition to set up more CCTV systems in England and Wales with £2 million Government funding in 1994–95. Local authorities will be able to bid for funds in partnership with the police and other organisations, including the private sector.

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list areas in which crime has fallen as a result of the installation of closed circuit television systems.

Mr. Maclean: Towns and cities all over the country report decreases in crime due to the presence of the cameras and the availability of video evidence to help convict criminals. Examples include Kings Lynn, Newcastle and Bradford, to name but a few.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on Government plans to incorporate the draft directive on article 8 of the European convention on human rights in reporting the use of closed circuit television systems into United Kingdom law.

Mr. Maclean: We have no plans to proceed in this way.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the guidelines that are available for the use of closed circuit television cameras in public areas.

Mr. Maclean: We shall shortly be issuing a good practice guide on the use of closed circuit television in public places. Copies will be sent to all police forces, local authorities and large businesses.

Police Authorities

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to ensure that best practice spreads between police authorities.

Mr. Howard: The Police and Magistrates' Courts Act 1994 codifies best practice and sets out clearly what is expected of police authorities.

Under the provisions of the Act, I laid a code of practice yesterday which should promote good practice on financial management.

Special Constables

Mr. Colin Shepherd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the assistance provided by special constables in routine police patrolling.

Mr. Howard: No specific assessment has been made. Her Majesty's inspectors of constabulary are told that specials spend a large part of their time on duty supporting regular police officers on patrol, and that this support is of real value to regular officers and the local community.

The Government recognise the importance of police foot patrol to members of the public, even in low crime areas. I recently announced the launch of a new type of special constables—the neighbourhood constable—who will patrol, on foot, their own neighbourhood.

Overseas Domestic Workers

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action his Department is planning to strengthen measures to protect overseas domestic workers from abusive employers during their stay in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Nicholas Baker: We are keeping the arrangements for the admission of domestic workers to the United Kingdom under review in consultation with the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and the Employment Department.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of state for the Home Department what public funding is available to voluntary organisations for help to overseas domestic workers seeking advice or help in cases of gross exploitation.

Mr. Nicholas Baker: Information about funding specifically for this purpose is not available.

DNA Sampling

Mr. Batiste: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received regarding the use of DNA sampling to fight crime; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard: Almost all the correspondence we have received has been supportive of our proposals to allow DNA samples to be taken in all recordable offences. The police have warmly welcomed our plans. They help bring the law into line with the capabilities of modern technology. The full force of modern science will be brought to bear upon the modern criminal.

Mr. Congdon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his response to the recommendations of the Royal Commission on criminal justice regarding DNA sampling.

Mr. Maclean: Our proposals for legislation arising from the Royal Commission's recommendations on DNA are contained in the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994.

Drugs (Sentencing)

Mr. Gallie: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to set minimum jail sentences for those who sell category A drugs; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: None. The courts should be left to determine appropriate sentences in individual cases.

The maximum penalty for supplying category A drugs is life imprisonment. We look to the courts to pass very long prison sentences in the most serious cases.

European Court of Justice

Mr. Jenkin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list issues affecting his Department that are due to come before the European Court of Justice for adjudication; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: A number, including the exclusion orders against Mr. Adams and Mr. Gallagher and interpretation of article 7a of the treaty of Rome.

Electoral Registration

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the applicability of citizens charter principles to electoral registration; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholas Baker: Electoral registration officers have a statutory duty to include in the electoral register the names of all people who appear to them to be eligible. If the rights of electors have been denied, remedies are available through the courts. My right hon. and learned Friend therefore has no plans to introduce a charter covering electoral registration.

Crime Statistics

Mr. Heald: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what are the latest figures on recorded crime in Hertfordshire.

Mr. Maclean: In the 12 months to June 1994, 54,268 offences were recorded by the police in Hertfordshire. This represents a decrease of eight per cent. on the corresponding period for the previous year.

Mr. Ottaway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has formed of current trends in the figures for recorded crime.

Mr. Maclean: The most recent figures, for the 12 months to June 1994, show that the number of crimes recorded by the police in England and Wales decreased by 5·5 per cent. compared with the previous 12 months. This is the largest fall over 12 months for 40 years. I very much hope that, following on as it does from the one per cent. fall for the whole of 1993, this will serve to reassure the public that recent rises in recorded crime can not only be slowed but actually reversed.

Prison Places, North-west

Mr. Lewis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to increase the number of prison places in the north-west.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Over the next five years more than 2,200 additional places will be provided.

Violent Crime

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, what assessment he has made of trends in violent crime.

Mr. Howard: Between 1981 and 1993, violent crime recorded by the police increased at a rate of 6 per cent. per year, compared with an increase in all recorded crime of 5 per cent. per year. In the 12 months to June 1994, violent crime accounted for 6 per cent. of all crimes recorded by the police.

The British crime survey provides an insight into people's experience of crime, whether or not they report it to the police. The survey suggests that for those offences that can be compared with the police figures, violent crime increased at a rate of less than 3 per cent. per year between 1981 and 1993.

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Brandreth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to visit the Cheshire probation service to discuss crime prevention; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholas Baker: My right hon. and learned Friend has no immediate plans to visit the Cheshire probation service.

Mr. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he next intends to visit police cells in Greater Manchester to discuss the number of remand and convicted prisoners being held therein.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: There are no plans to do so.

Home Leave (Prisoners)

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on his policy on home leave for prisoners.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: A comprehensive review of the existing arrangements for home leave and temporary release has recently been completed. As a result of this work, new arrangements, which place greater emphasis on the safety of the public, will be announced shortly.

In the meantime, instructions are being issued to governors that all temporary absence from prison will be subject to a tighter and more rigorous risk assessment. The police and probation service will be consulted about the release of prisoners, particularly those convicted of serious violent offences.

Prisoners who are released temporarily will be subject to spot checks, and those who breach the terms of their licence will be dealt with according to the prison disciplinary system. These changes will be implemented in full by no later than 1 December 1994.

Cannabis

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many adult cautions were issued by the Metropolitan police for the possession of cannabis for personal use.

Mr. Maclean: I understand that the latest provisional figures for 1993 record that 8,050 persons received adult cautions for possession of cannabis within the Metropolitan police district.

Squatting

Mr. Streeter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what impact he expects the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 to have on the practice of squatting; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: My right hon. and learned Friend is confident that the Bill will provide much greater protection to property owners who wish to remove squatters from their property. Through the provision of a quick and effective remedy for aggrieved property owners, squatters will no longer be able to delay the eviction procedure while remaining in possession of the property.

Crime

Mr. Mans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking to encourage people to help the police tackle crime.

Mr. Maclean: On 28 September, my right hon. and learned Friend launched the partners against crime initiative, encouraging individuals actively to help the police. This initiative has three main strands—neighbourhood watch, street watch and neighbourhood constables, and is linked into the expansion of the special constabulary.

Neighbourhood Watch, London

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement about progress of neighbourhood watch in London.

Mr. Maclean: I am pleased to report the success of neighbourhood watch in London. There are over 10,887 schemes covering more than 1 million households. I understand that in my hon. Friend's own constituency 50 per cent. of all households are members of neighbourhood watch.

Rapists

Mr. Faber: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what facilities are available in Her Majesty's prisons for the counselling and rehabilitation of convicted rapists; how widespread are these facilities; and if their use is compulsory.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mr. David Faber, dated 3 November 1994:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the counselling and rehabilitation of convicted rapists. Since 1992, the Prison Service in England and Wales has been running substantial treatment programmes for sex offenders, both rapists and child molesters, in 17 adult prisons and one young offender institution. Four more establishments will shortly join the programme.

During the year ending 31 March 1994, the Prison Service assessed the treatment needs of 904 sex offenders and treated 439 inmates on this programme.

Originally inmates serving sentences of four years or more for a sex offence were targeted and we are now able to offer the programme to all adult male offenders in this category. We are expanding the programme to any prisoner who wishes to have treatment and has sufficient sentence length to complete the programme, including suitable young offenders.

The programme is not compulsory because an inmate must be motivated to change his behaviour for the programme to be effective. However, since successful completion of the programme is regarded as an essential part of preparation for release, a prisoner's participation and performance during the programme will be considered when parole decisions are made.

Private Security Firms

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what checks his Department makes in respect of (a) criminal records and (b) training of employees of firms contracted by his Department to carry out private security work.

Mr. Maclean: The checks made in respect of criminal records of employees of private security firms contracted to undertake security work on behalf of the Home Office vary according to the requirements of the contract, or the sensitivity of the work. Units will make checks in appropriate cases. Any particular training requirements will be specified in the invitation to tender and checked before award of contract.

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 28 October, Official Report, column 874, what plans he has to introduce regulations to prevent a person with a criminal record from offering security services.

Mr. Maclean: There are no present plans to introduce such regulations, but we keep the case for intervention under review.

Mr Kani Yilmaz

Mr. Austin-Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on how many previous occasions Mr. Kani Yilmaz has visited the United Kingdom; and what action was then taken by his Department.

Mr. Nicholas Baker: Mr. Yilmaz previously entered the United Kingdom on 23 June 1993, 2 October 1993, 4 December 1993 and 12 April 1994. On each occasion he was admitted as a visitor.

Mr. Austin-Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he first became aware of the intention of Mr. Kani Yilmaz to enter the United Kingdom on his most recent visit.

Mr. Nicholas Baker: On 24 October after his arrival the previous day.

Mr. Austin-Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what contacts his Department had with Mr. Kani Yilmaz on his previous visits to the United Kingdom.

Mr. Nicholas Baker: I am not aware of any such contacts other than with officers of the Immigration Service on arrivals and departures from the United Kingdom.

Mr. Austin-Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when Mr. Kani Yilmaz entered the United Kingdom; and what action was then taken by immigration officers.

Mr. Nicholas Baker: Mr. Kani Yilmaz last entered the United Kingdom on 23 October 1994. An immigration officer gave him leave to enter for three months.

Mr. Austin-Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if Mr. Kani Yilmaz has ever entered the United Kingdom unlawfully, or been in breach of immigration rules by overstaying or for any other reason; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholas Baker: According to our records Mr. Yilmaz has never previously entered or remained in the United Kingdom in breach of the immigration rules.

Mr. Austin-Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he first became aware of the arrival of Mr. Kani Yilmaz in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Nicholas Baker: I first became aware of Mr. Kani Yilmaz's arrival in the United Kingdom on 24 October.

Mr. Austin-Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he decided to issue a notice of intention to deport Mr. Kani Yilmaz; and when it was served.

Mr. Nicholas Baker: My right hon. and learned Friend directed on 25 October 1994 that Mr. Faysal Dunlayici, also known as Kani Yilmaz, should be served with a notice of intention to deport and detained. The notice was served on Mr. Dunlayici on 26 October.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many asylum seekers are currently detained under Immigration Acts powers in Her Majesty's prison Doncaster; and how long on average these detainees are being held under these powers.

Mr. Nicholas Baker: None.

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many asylum seekers released from detention on bail by the Immigration Appellate Authority have subsequently absconded or otherwise failed to comply with the terms of such bail (a) in the last five years and (b) since 26 July 1993;

(2) how many asylum seekers detained under Immigration Act powers have been released on bail by the Immigration Appellate Authority (a) in the past five years and (b) since 26 July 1993.

Mr. Nicholas Baker: Information on the number of asylum seekers released from detention on bail by the Immigration Appellate Authority could be obtained only at disproportionate costs. Information on those released on bail that subsequently abscond is not separately identifiable in the statistics.

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many asylum seekers have been detained under the provisions of section 7 of the Asylum and Immigration Appeals Act 1993 since 26 July 1993;

(2) how many asylum seekers are currently detained under the provisions of section 7 of the Asylum and Immigration Appeals Act 1993.

Mr. Nicholas Baker: Section 7 of the Asylum and Immigration Appeals Act 1993 refers to the curtailment of leave to enter or remain in the United Kingdom after an asylum applicant has had their claim for asylum refused. It has no provision for the detention of asylum seekers. However, there have been no cases detained since 26 July 1993 who were awaiting removal or an appeal because their leave to remain had been curtailed.

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department approximately what proportion of those applying for asylum in the United Kingdom in 1993 arrived (a) without travel documents and (b) in possession of fraudulent travel documents.

Mr. Nicholas Baker: The available information relates to asylum applications lodged at the United Kingdom ports of Heathrow, Gatwick and Dover. In 1993, of the 6,725 applications for asylum, excluding dependants, lodged at these ports, an estimated 40 per cent. were without travel documents and 20 per cent. were in possession of fraudulent travel documents.

Deaths in Custody

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the total number of deaths in custody for young offenders and the coroners' verdicts returned for the last five years for which figures are available.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Dr. Lynne Jones, dated 3 November, 1994:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question if he will list the total number of deaths in custody for young offenders and the coroners' verdicts returned for the last five years for which figures are available.

The attached table records the information requested for the year 1990 to November 1st 1994.

Young offender deaths 1990–1994

	Suicide	Misadventure	Accidental	Open	Other	Total
1990	5 (2)	—	—	5	—	10
1991	4	—	1	—	—	5
1992	4	1	—	2	[1]1	8
1993	1	—	—	2	—	3
1994[2]	1	1	—	1	—	10

The figure in brackets refers to verdicts where a 'lack of care' rider has been used as a qualification. It does not relate to the concept of civil negligence nor does it indicate a breach of duty by anyone.

[1] Cell mate charged with murder.

[2] 1994 figures are up to November 1. Verdicts are awaited in 7 cases for 1994.

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the number of deaths in custody in the last five years which have resulted in disciplinary proceedings being brought against custodial officers.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Dr. Lynne Jones, dated 3 November 1994:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent question about the number of deaths in custody in the last five years which have resulted in disciplinary proceedings.

I will write to you as soon as possible.

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will set out the rules in relation to the publication of reports into the circumstances surrounding a death in custody; and what plans he has to change them.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Dr. Lynne Jones, dated 3 November 1994:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent question about the rules in relation to the publication of reports into the circumstances surrounding a death in custody; and the plans he has to change them.

Subject to considerations of security and to the Coroner's consent, the Prison Service is generally prepared to disclose, in advance of any inquest, copies of documents which are provided to the Coroner for the purpose of the inquest to anyone who is a "properly interested person" under the Coroners' Rules.

However reports of follow-up internal investigations, including statements taken by the investigating Governor, are not disclosed. It is necessary that the Prison Service should be able to conduct its own review of the case in confidence. The Coroner is at liberty to take statements separately for the purpose of the inquest and any requests for disclosure of such statements would be for him or her to consider. There are no plans to change this policy.

A similar policy applies in relation to deaths of persons in the custody of the Prison Service detained under the Immigration Act.

Security Service

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what steps are being taken to recruit more women from outside the service into senior positions within the Security Service;

(2) what positive steps are being taken to promote women within the ranks of the Security Service;

Mr. Howard: The Security Service operates an equal opportunities policy. Recruitment and promotion are based on merit not gender.

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will list the grades of post in order of seniority within the structure of the Security Service;

(2) how many personnel are currently employed by the Security Service; and how many are women;

(3) how many women are employed in each grade of post within the Security Service as a percentage of the total number of staff in that grade.

Mr. Howard: The Security Service employs about 2,000 people of whom just over 53 per cent. are women. The senior management group which is responsible for the overall direction of the service's work, and the general intelligence duties group, who are responsible for the service's investigative, assessment and policy work as well as operational tasks, together comprise 367 staff of whom 144—39 per cent.—are women. For operational reason I am not prepared to give a breakdown of the remaining occupational groups.

Secure Training Centres

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the organisations who have expressed an interest in running one or more secure training centres.

Mr. Maclean: A total of 25 organisations have expressed an interest in tendering for the financing, designing, building/refurbishing, operating and maintaining of five secure training centres. The names of the organisations invited to tender will be announced when the invitations to tender are issued.

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what guidelines will be put in place on the prevention of suicides and self-harm at the new secure training centres.

Mr. Maclean: Each secure training centre will be required to develop and maintain a suicide and self-harm management and assessment policy which will ensure that each trainee is assessed for the risk of suicide and/or self-harm on arrival at the centre and is re-assessed on a regular basis. The requirement to design the regime and the buildings to minimise these risks will be a prominent feature of the invitation to tender, and will be given close attention in assessing bids.

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the projected average level of occupancy for the secure training centres.

Mr. Maclean: Each secure training centre will provide 40 places. The actual level of occupancy will be determined by the courts and their use of the secure training order.

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to announce the names of the private sector contractors who will be running the secure training centres.

Mr. Maclean: An announcement will be made once the competitive tendering exercise has been completed.

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if the national curriculum will be taught in the new secure training centres.

Mr. Maclean: Secure training centres will provide a broad and balanced curriculum appropriate to the age, aptitude and ability and special educational needs of the individual trainee. It will reflect the national curriculum as far as possible.

Remand (Juveniles)

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his oral answer of 14 May, Official Report 1992, columns 737–38, if he is now in a position to state when he intends to end the practice of remanding juveniles to adult prisons.

Mr. Maclean: It is the Government's policy to end remands of juveniles to prisons as soon as possible. To this end, local authorities have begun building programmes to increase the stock of secure accommodation specifically for this purpose.

Citizenship Applications

Sir Michael Neubert: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will investigate the use of an honorific title by Mr. Ali Fayed in regard to his application for British citizenship.

Mr. Nicholas Baker: No.

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many applications for British citizenship have been outstanding for more than 21 months.

Mr. Nicholas Baker: There were 752 applications outstanding on 31 October 1994.

Sir Michael Neubert: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make it his policy to introduce a system of checks on the use of honorific titles by foreign nationals applying for British citizenship.

Mr. Nicholas Baker: No.

Immigration Detention Centres

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the total cost in the financial year to 31 March to the Immigration Service of administering its immigration detention centres.

Mr. Nicholas Baker: The costs met by the Immigration Service in the financial year 1993–94 were about £7·5 million.

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what was the average net operating cost per inmate per week in Harmondsworth immigration detention centre for the financial year to 31 March;

(2) what was the average net operating cost per inmate per week in Campsfield house immigration detention centre for the financial year to 31 March.

Mr. Nicholas Baker: This information is not available in the form requested, but over the whole estate the average weekly cost per detainee is estimated at just over £800.

Drug Abuse

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to encourage charity shops selling clothing to young people to display warnings about drug abuse; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: We are in favour of any initiative which effectively raises young people's awareness of the facts about drug misuse and the associated risks. The Government's consultative document on a drug strategy for 1995–98, published last month, contains new proposals to help young people to resist drugs, including publicity campaigns and support for schools in providing effective drugs education.

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his policy towards slogans promoting the use of drugs appearing on clothing for young people; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The Government are totally opposed to the encouragement or glamorisation of drug misuse. Section 19 of the Misuse of Drugs Act 1971 makes it an offence for a person to incite another to commit an offence under this Act. The investigation and prosecuting of offences is entirely a matter for the police and the Crown Prosecution Service. The decision as to whether an offence has been committed is a matter for the courts.

Re-convictions

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many offenders were re-convicted within two years of release from (a) local authority secure accommodation and (b) young offender institutions for each of the past five years for which figures are available.

Mr. Maclean: The information requested on re-conviction rates for local authority secure accommodation is not centrally available.

The latest available information on re-conviction rates of young offenders is contained in chapter 9 of "Prison Statistics, England and Wales, 1992", Cm. 2581, and relates to offenders discharged from prison during 1987. Relevant figures are contained in tables 9.7 and 9.9. Figures are not given for young offender institutions as they did not replace detention centres and youth custody until 1988.

Stolen Vehicles

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what recovery rate has been achieved of stolen vehicles for each of the last five years for which figures are available;

(2) what records are kept detailing recovery rates of vehicles reported stolen.

Mr. Maclean: Information on the number of vehicles recorded as stolen and subsequently recovered is available for 42 of the 43 police force areas in England and Wales, and is provided to the Home Office by those forces. The recovery rate for the last five years is given in the following table.

Notifiable offences of theft and unauthorised taking of motor vehicles recorded by the police

England and Wales	1989	1990	1991	1992	1993
Offences recorded	393,399	494,209	581,901	587,856	597,519

Ms Gordon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much money has been spent on tracking the movement and activities of travellers by specialist police units during 1991–92 and 1993–94; and what is the planned budget for 1995–96 to 1997–98.

Mr. Maclean: No Home Office records are maintained of specific operational costs incurred by police forces. The deployment of resources for police operations is a matter for individual chief officers of police.

Remand Prisoners

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many remand prisoners are currently held in police station cells.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mr. Robert Ainsworth, dated 3 November 1994:

On 31 October there were 132 remand prisoners held in police cells.

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent question about the average net operating cost per inmate per week in the Haslar Home Office holding centre for the financial year to 31 March.

In the financial year to 31 March 1994 the net operating cost per prisoner per week for Haslar holding centre was £300.

Prison Service Costs

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the average net operating cost per inmate per week in all Prison Service establishments for the financial year to 31 March.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mr. Robert Ainsworth, dated 3 November 1994:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent question on the average cost per inmate per week.

The average cost per prisoner place per week in 1993–94 was £437 (£22,712 per year). This figure excludes exceptional items: the cost of holding prisoners in police cells and compensation for abandonment of plans to relocate the Prison Service headquarters to Derby.

Young Offender Institutions

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what research he has commissioned which indicates that young offender institutions are more effective than secure units in the local authority community home system; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Maclean: In 1992, the Home Office published research and planning unit paper 66—"Juveniles Sentenced for Serious Offences: A comparison of Regimes in Young Offender Institutions and Local Authority Community Homes". The paper reported the results of a comparison of young offender institutions and local authority community homes, including the education and training provided, costs, reconviction and absconding rates.

Police Posts

Mr. George: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police posts have been privatised or individualised in the last five years in each of the following areas (a) England and Wales, (b) Scotland, (c) Northern Ireland, (d) the west midlands and (e) H division, Walsall.

Mr. Maclean: No police posts have been privatised in England and Wales, but as a consequence of contracting out of the court escort function there is to be a phased reduction of 271 officers in the Metropolitan police from October 1994 to March 1995.

The position in Scotland and Northern Ireland is a matter for my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland and my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland.

Prisons (Suicide Prevention)

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what guidelines exist in relation to the handling of prisoners at risk of harming themselves.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Dr. Lynne Jones, dated 3 November 1994:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question asking what guidelines exist in relation to the handling of prisoners at risk of harming themselves.

Instruction to Governors 1/1994 'Caring for the Suicidal in Custody' introduced new arrangements for the care of prisoners at risk of suicide and self-harm, which updated and expanded arrangements set out in the previous instructions issued in May 1989. The new guidelines came into force on the 1 April 1994.

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which prisons currently implement official suicide prevention strategies.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Dr. Lynne Jones, dated 3 November 1994:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question on which prisons currently implement official suicide prevention strategies.

The Prison Services' revised suicide prevention strategy was laid out in Instruction to Governors 1/1994, which updated and expanded arrangements set out in a previous instruction issued in May 1989. The new instruction was issued in February of this year and came into force on 1 April 1994 in all establishments.

Police (Representation)

Sir Michael Neubert: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to alter the provisions for local representation on police consultative and community groups in London.

Mr. Maclean: Under section 106 of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984, it is for the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis to make arrangements for obtaining the views of people in the Metropolitan police district about matters concerning the policing of the area. We have issued guidance to the commissioner concerning arrangements for the Metropolitan police district emphasising that consultative groups should be as representative as possible of the local community. We have no present plans to revise that guidance.

Departmental Property

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what properties are owned or leased by his Department for the use of Ministers; what was the total running cost for each property for the latest year available broken down into (a) furniture and fittings, (b) maintenance, (c) staffing, including the number of butlers, cooks and housekeepers, (d) food and hospitality and (e) other costs; what is the estimated value of each property; and how many times in the latest year the property was stayed in overnight by a Minister.

Mr. Howard: The Home Office leases one property used, for security reasons, as the London residence of the Home Secretary of the day. The value of the property is not known. There are no Home Office staff employed at the property and the Home Secretary is responsible for meeting all expenditure on food, private telephone calls and hospitality. Running costs in 1993-94 totalled £79,781 comprising:

(a) Furniture and fittings	1,076
(b) Maintenance	[1]40,385

(2) what is his best estimate of the running costs in a full year of the proposed body to investigate alleged miscarriages of justice.

Mr. Maclean: We are committed to establishing such a body as soon as is practicable. I am not yet in a position to say when the necessary legislation will be brought forward but information on the body's running costs will be made available, in the usual way, when the Bill is introduced.

Visas

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the United Kingdom post in Islamabad asked for inquiries to be made in the United Kingdom into the application by Mrs. Abida Khatoon (Ref: IMM/C3052) to join her husband in the United kingdom; when he expects those inquiries to be completed; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholas Baker: I will write to the hon. Member.

EU Common Visa List

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what Representations he is making to remove New Zealand and Jamaica from the common visa list of the European Union; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholas Baker: New Zealand and Jamaica are not among the countries proposed by the Commission for inclusion on the common visa list.

Spencer Stuart Consultants

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many contracts his Department or Government agencies responsible to his Department have entered into with Spencer Stuart consultants in the last two years.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The Home Office has not let any contracts to the named company during the specified period.

Tiger Products

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his of 27 October, Official Report, column 769, what progress has been made in the investigations by the Metropolitan police arising from information passed to them by the World Wide Fund for Nature; and how many people have been charged with offences arising from the possession of tiger products in each of the last five years.

Mr. Maclean: I understand from the Commissioner of the Police of the Metropolis that the investigation is still in progress. Information on the number of people charged so is not collated centrally.

Electoral Register

Mr. Hunter: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will bring forward proposals to allow electors not to have their addresses printed on the Electoral Register for specified reasons.

Mr. Nicholas Baker: This question was considered by the working group on electoral registration, set up as part of our general review of electoral law and practice. Officials are due to report to Ministers on the findings of the review shortly.

Police Finances

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has now abandoned his draft formula for setting police force finances; when he intends to present new proposals for setting police force finance in England and Wales; and what scheme he intends to use for the 1995–96 financial year.

Mr. Maclean: The setting of police force budgets is a matter for police authorities.

A version of the new police funding formula was issued for consultation to police and local authority associations in September. This version of the formula did not take sufficient account of the need to provide stability and continuity in policing. We therefore concluded that, for 1995–96, police establishment should be included in the funding formula as an indicator of the need for policing. Police authorities will be notified of their allocations of central Government support in the same way as other classes of local authorities. Details of the proposed local government settlement for England and Wales for 1995–96 will be available very shortly after the Budget announcement.

Workplace Fires

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people were (a) killed and (b) injured in fires in places of work in (i) 1992–93 and (ii) 1993–94.

Secure Training Unit, Medomsley

Ms. Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when his Department expects to respond to letters from Derwentside district council of 1 September, 15 September and 6 October regarding planning permission for the proposed secure training unit at Medomsley; and what are the reasons for the delay.

Mr. Maclean: I understand that the letters from Derwentside district council concern an application for planning permission made under section 299 of the Town and Country Planning Act 1990.

The letter of 1 September was an acknowledgement of the application and a response was not requested. The letters of 15 September and 6 October invited payment of a planning fee in connection with the application. Payments of this kind are not normally made until the enabling legislation has been enacted. I apologise for the delay in responding to the correspondence. My officials will shortly be writing to Derwentside district council about the application.

Ms. Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department under what guidance or regulation the Home Office made an application for planning permission to Derwentside district council for a secure unit on part of the former site of Medomsley prison; and for what reason his Department was unable to pay the statutory fee.

Mr. Maclean: Applications have been made for the development of a secure training centre on part of the site of the former detention centre at Medomsley under DOE circular 18/84 and also section 299 of the Town and Country Planning Act 1990.

In respect of any planning fee due, payments of this kind are not normally made until the enabling legislation has been enacted.

Market Testing

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his current calculation of the costs of preparation for market testing in his Department in terms of (a) payments to consultants and (b) other costs.

Mr. Michael Forsyth: From 1 April 1992 to 30 June 1994 expenditure by the Home Office including the Prison Service in support of the competing for quality programme was approximately £1·5 million on payments to consultants—including advice on efficiency improvements for units subject to competition—and approximately £6·5 million on other costs. It is estimated that annual savings of £27 million have been generated by this programme so far.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list those parts of the Prison Service which are scheduled to be market-tested, giving in each case the projected timetable and the estimated cost of the market-test.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 24 October 1994]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Ms Joan Ruddock, dated 3 November 1994:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about those parts of the Prison Service scheduled to be market-tested.

Work is currently underway to market test the management of the vehicle fleet. In addition, plans are being developed to market test the Parole Board Secretariat and one or two establishments. Invitations to tender for the management of the vehicle fleet are expected by the end of 1994 and a decision on the preferred supplier by June 1995. The anticipated staff and consultancy costs of managing this market test are £30,000. The timetable for the market testing of the Parole Board Secretariat has not yet been planned and therefore the estimated costs are not known.

Once the Prison Board has decided on which one or two establishments will be market tested, it is estimated that the preferred supplier will be identified within about nine months. The projected staff and consultancy costs for managing each test are expected to be about £100,000.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will specify, for each individual prison and department within the Prison Service, the exact benefits, financial or otherwise, which have accrued directly as a result of market testing and/or the contracting out of the management of the Wolds, Blakenhurst, Doncaster and Strangeways prisons, and any other market-testing exercise within the agency to date.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 24 October 1994]: The Director General of the Prison Service will write to the hon. Member.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list those parts of the Prison Service which have been market-tested to date, giving in each case the cost of the market-test, the date of the market-test and the outcome.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 24 October 1994]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Savings of at least £17 million a year have been produced and therefore net savings of £14 million have been generated.

Mr. Nicholas Baker: This information is not recorded.

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many fire certificates issued under the Fire Precautions Act 1971 are in force in places of work.

Mr. Nicholas Baker: In 1993–94 there were 126,417 such certificates in force.

Police Finances

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how soon police forces in England and Wales will be notified of their financial allocation for 1995–96.

Mr. Maclean: Police authorities will be notified of their allocations of central Government support in the same way as other classes of local authorities. Details of the proposed local government settlement for England and Wales for 1995–96 will be available very shortly after the Budget announcement.

Mr. Nicholas Baker: Figures on fire deaths are provided on a calendar year basis. In 1992 there were 594 fire deaths in dwellings and 11,206 non-fatal casualties. Provisional figures for 1993 show that there were 535 deaths from fires in dwellings and 11,370 non-fatal casualties.

Prison Staff Statistics

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will provide a breakdown of (a) staff posts by rank and (b) actual numbers in post at the following prisons: Wolds, Blakenhurst, Manchester and Doncaster at the latest available date.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 24 October 1994]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Ms Joan Ruddock, dated 3 November 1994:

Children of God

Mr. Frank Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what effect recent discoveries about the organisation entitled the Children of God will have on his proposed changes in the responsibilities of the Obscene Publications Department of the Metropolitan police.

Mr. Maclean: The obscene publications branch—SO1(4)—is within the scope of the Commissioner's intended restructuring exercise. This aims to make the best possible use of resources in the fight against crimes, including all forms of obscene publications and paedophilia.

I understand that the Commissioner intends responsibility for paedophilia and top level criminality uncovered by investigations into pornography to remain centralised within SO1(4). These recent changes within the Metropolitan police will not effect their ability to investigate allegations of child abuse against organisations such as the Children of God.

Mr. Frank Cook: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he will take to deal with the situation discovered in relation to the organisation entitled the Children of God; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholas Baker: The Government understand the concerns about the activities of certain organisations. The Government have no power to ban such groups.

Where allegations of child abuse or any other wrong doing are made against groups or individuals it would be a matter for the police to investigate.

Prisons (Drugs)

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what is the estimated cost of introducing drug testing in prisons in 1994–95 and each of the next five years;

(2) in which prisons pilot drug testing schemes will be conducted;

(3) what is the timetable for the introduction of drug testing in prisons.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 24 October 1994]: The Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 provides prison officers with the power, where an authorisation is in force for that prison, to require prisoners to produce a urine sample for the purpose of testing for controlled drugs. New prison rules will make it a disciplinary offence for a prisoner to misuse controlled drugs. It will also be an offence for a prisoner to refuse to provide a sample for testing purposes.

I intend to use these powers to introduce a random testing programme covering all inmates. Prisons will be required to test a set proportion of their population each month.

In addition, prison officers will require prisoners to provide a sample for testing at any time if the officer has reasonable suspicion that the prisoner has been misusing drugs.

Persistent offenders will be tested at a much greater frequency than the general prison population.

Eight prison establishments have been chosen for the initial phase of the drug testing programme. These are Bristol, Holloway, Lindholm, Pentonville, Wakefield and Wayland prisons, and HMYOI/RC Feltham and HMP/YOI Stoke Heath.

The initial phase will commence once the necessary legislation is in place early next year. It is our intention that the drug testing programme will then be developed quickly across the remaining prison establishments.

Initial estimates of the costs of the first phase are approximately £200,000 in 1994–95 and, in the light of the pilot schemes, the estimate will be revised for the next five years.

Mr. Eastham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information he has on the proportion of prisoners who are drug addicts using shared injection equipment; and if prison management will provide (a) needles or (b) bleach for cleaning needles.

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 1 November 1994]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Derek Lewis to Mr. Ken Eastham dated 3 November 1994:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office to reply to your recent Question on the proportion of prisoners who are drug addicts using shared injection equipment and the provision of needles and bleach in prisons.

The Prison Service views, as a top priority, the reduction of drug misuse in the English and Welsh prisons. There is no research on the proportion of prisoners who are drug addicts and use shared drug injecting equipment.

The policy is that neither needles or bleach are provided in prisons.

EMPLOYMENT

Labour Statistics

Mr. Dowd: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what proportion of unemployed people went on from restart interviews to (a) restart or other training, (b) full-time jobs, or (c) part-time jobs of fewer than 24 hours a week in the last 12 months.

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service Agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from M.E.G. Fogden to Mr. Jim Dowd, dated 3 November 1994:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about the proportion of unemployed people who went on from Restart interviews to a Restart course or other training and full or part time employment.

Unfortunately, not all of the information you have requested is available as we do not differentiate between full and part time employment placings.

Between October 1993 and September, 842,857 clients started Employment Department (ED) employment or training programmes following a Restart Interview. This figure includes Jobclub, Jobplan, Job Review Workshop, Work Trials, Business Start-Up Scheme, Community Action and Job Interview Guarantee as well as Restart Courses and training options like Training for Work and Learning for Work. This represents 29·4 per cent. of the total Restart interviews conducted.

Restart interviews also achieve other positive outcomes including clients moving on to other benefits and signing off for other reasons. Between October 1993 and September these additional positive outcomes totalled 6·3 per cent. of all Restart interviews. The total positive outcomes figure therefore for the 12 months to September equalled 37·2 per cent. of all Restart interviews.

In terms of immediate jobs, between October 1993 and September, Restart interviews led to 43,880 clients being placed into jobs. This represents 1·5 per cent. of the total Restart interviews conducted.

I should emphasise that the figures quoted above represent only the immediate result of Restart interviews. Many other people subsequently take up a job or a place on an employment or training programme as a result of the guidance given to them at their interview. Independent researchers who have studied the Restart Interview programme have all concluded that this indirect effect is extremely significant.

I hope this is helpful.

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State of Employment what percentages of the (a) male and (b) female population aged between 55 and 65 years are currently in paid (i) full-time and (ii) part-time employment.

Mr. Oppenheim: The "Labour Force Survey" for spring 1994 shows that, of men aged 55–64, 50 per cent. were in full-time employment and 6 per cent. in part-time employment. The equivalent figures for women were 15 per cent. and 23 per cent. respectively.

Employment on Trial Scheme

Mr. Dewar: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many people in the latest period for which figures are available took advantage of the employment on trial scheme leaving a job within six weeks without any benefit sanction.

Miss Widdecombe: Unemployed claimants who find work are not required to notify the Employment Service that they are taking advantage of the employment on trial rule. There are as a result no records available of how many people successfully stay in their new jobs rather than returning to unemployment. ES does not currently maintaim records of the number of people who are not sanctioned on leaving a job after the sixth week of their trial period.

Factory Inspectors

Ms. Gordon: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many factory inspectors were employed in England and Wales in each year since 1979.

Mr. Oppenheim: The following table gives (a) the total number of factory inspectors employed on inspection duties, based in the Health and Safety Executive's area offices in England and Wales and (b) the total numbers of factory inspectors employed in HSE in Great Britain.

1 April	(a)	(b)
1979	579·0	742·5
1980	585·5	759·5
1981	569·5	735·0
1982	531·0	678·5
1983	507·5	654·5
1984	487·0	627·0
1985	504·0	651·0
1986	492·0	623·0
1987	490·5	621·5

1990	509·5	634·5
1991	521·0	651·0
1992	561·0	698·5
1993	567·0	707·5
1994	562·5	702·5

Figures show full–time equivalent staff: part–time staff counted as 0·5.

Not including specialist inspectors, who were part of the factory inspectorate prior to 1986.

Workplace Accidents

Ms. Gordon: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many accidents at work resulting in serious injuries occurred in each year since 1979.

Mr. Oppenheim: The information is not available in the form requested. For the calender years 1981 to 1985 injuries at work were reported under the Notification of Accidents and Dangerous Occurrences Regulations; from 1 April 1986 definitions were extended under the Reporting of Injuries, Diseases and Dangerous Occurrences Regulations. The number of accidents that led to these injuries cannot be separately identified.

Refuge Holes

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what are the statutory requirements in respect of refuge holes by the roadways of working collieries.

Mr. Oppenheim: Section 40 of the Mines and Quarries Act 1954 requires the mine manager to provide refuge holes at prescribed intervals on roads along which vehicles operate. More detailed requirements concerning the intervals between refuge holes in coal mines, their dimensions and other matters are set out in regulation 59 of the Coal and Other Mines (Shafts and Outlets) Regulations 1960.

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is his estimate of (a) the number of refuge holes which have been removed from the roadways of working collieries and (b) the extent of new roadway which has been provided without such refuge holes, together with an estimate of the shortfall in the number of such holes; what reasons he has been given for such removal or non-construction; and who authorised such removal or non-construction.

Mr. Oppenheim: The Health and Safety Executive is not aware that any refuge holes have been removed from the roadways of working collieries or that any new roadway has been built without the required refuge holes. Any shortfall in provision arises from the repair of rebuilding of existing refuge holes necessitated by strata movement. It is not possible to estimate the extent of this work at any one time.

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is his estimate of the current short-fall in refuge holes in the roadways of working collieries with reference to the legal requirement.

Mr. Oppenheim: This information is not available. Conditions below ground are constantly changing due to the dynamic effects of strata movement which requires refuge holes to be repaired or remade as appropriate.

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many special breaches of regulation have occurred in the last two years in respect of the removal of or failure to provide refuge holes by the roadways of working collieries.

Mr. Oppenheim: The information is not available in the form requested.

Mr. Clapham: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what assessment he has made of the effect of re–establishing refuge holes on (a) the established rock bolting pattern and (b) the affected roadways.

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 28 October 1994]: The design of roadway support systems always take account of refuge hole formation.

In re–establishing refuge holes, the method of supporting them in conjunction with the support system adopted for the roadway has to be fully considered in the preparation of the manager's support rules.

Industrial Injuries

Mr. Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what transitional protection will be afforded to non–employed status trainees hitherto eligible to benefit under his Department's analogous industrial injuries scheme, following the enactment of the Social Security (Incapacity For Work) Act 1994; and what transitional arrangements will apply for participants in other schemes funded through his Department and affected by this legislation.

Mr. Paice: With effect from 13 April 1995, non–employed status participants who are injured, or who contract a prescribed disease, will need to make their initial claim to the Department of Social Security. Where a trainee does not satisfy the contribution requirements for the receipt of incapacity benefit, income support can be claimed.

Payment of disablement benefit and severe disablement allowance is unaltered by the new legislation. Non–employed status participants who qualify for these benefits, whether adults or young people, will continue to receive equivalent payments through the Department under the analogous industrial injuries scheme.

The new arrangements are not retrospective. Payments to participants injured prior to 13 April 1995 will continue for as long as medical evidence confirms this to be necessary.

Departmental Property

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what properties are owned or leased by his Department for the use of Ministers; what was the total running cost for each property for the latest year available broken down into (a) furniture and fittings, (b) maintenance, (c) staffing, including the number of butlers, cooks and housekeepers, (d) food and hospitality and (e) other costs; what is the estimated value of each property; and how many times in the latest year the property was stayed in overnight by a Minister.

Miss Widdecombe: The Employment Department group does not own or lease any properties for the specific use of Ministers.

Jubilee Line Extension

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what steps he is taking to investigate the incident affecting the Jubilee line extension project which has caused the closure of Westminster underground station.

Mr. Oppenheim: Inspectors from the Health and Safety Executive have already commenced an investigation into the incident at Westminster underground station on 31 October.

Mr. Raynsford: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will now investigate the safety of both the Jubilee line extension and Heathrow express projects.

Mr. Oppenheim: On 27 October the Health and Safety Commission announced that it had asked the Health and Safety Executive to investigate the partial collapse of tunnels under construction at Heathrow airport. The tunnelling technique being used, the new austrian tunnelling method—NATM—has also been adopted for use on part of the Jubilee line extension project; contractors have suspended the use of the NATM technique as a precautionary measure. HSE has asked for tunnelling not to re-start at Heathrow or on the Jubilee line until it is clear that this can be done safely.

Apart from NATM, HSE will continue to address health and safety matters in connection with other aspects of work on both projects as part of its general programme of inspection visits.

Spencer Stuart Consultants

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment how many contracts his Department or Government agencies responsible to his Department have entered into with Spencer Stuart consultants in the last two years.

Miss Widdecombe: I know of no such contracts.

Work Permits

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment if he will make a statement regarding the issuing of work permits to non-European Community citizens resident in other European Community countries.

Mr. Oppenheim: A work permit is normally required by an overseas national from outside the European economic area who is seeking to take employment in Great Britain, irrespective of his current place of residence.

Market Testing

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Employment what is his current calculation of the costs of preparation for market testing in his Department in terms of (a) payments to consultants and (b) other costs.

Mr. Oppenheim: The total costs for the Employment Department group for the period to 30 June 1994 have been estimated as follows:

(a) £1·9 million for consultancy fees, which covers consultancy support to in-house bid teams and to the Department;

(b) £4·4 million for other departmental costs, which covers set up and running costs for central market testing units.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Quotas

Mr. Hendry: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many category 3(c) applications his Department has received for (a) sheep quota and (b) suckler cow quota for each year for which figures are available; and how many of those applications have been successful.

Mr. Jack: Some 2,541 applications for sheep quota and 1,606 applications for suckler cow quota from category 3(c) of the national reserve have been received. Allocations will be made later in November. I will write to my hon. Friend with further details as soon as I am able.

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he expects allocation of further sheep quota from the national reserve to be made; and how long a period of time will be given thereafter for leasing and transferring of quotas.

Mr. Jack: The processing of sheep quota from the national reserve categories 3 to 7 will be completed by mid-November and allocations will be made thereafter. The second period for notifying transfers and leases will open after reserve allocations have been made and is expected to last for six weeks.

Animal Importation (Slaughter)

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many sheep and other animals are being imported annually for slaughter, from where, and to which destinations.

Mrs. Browning [pursuant to his reply, 21 April 1994, column 625-26]: The table included in my predecessor's reply showed imports of small numbers of live animals from Nicaragua and Iran. Subsequent investigation by Her Majesty's Customs and Excise has established that in all cases these imports were in fact from the Irish Republic but had been miscoded.

A revised table, included other revisions, follows.

Animal Transportation

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) how many consignments of calves have been exported since 1 October 1994 from (a) Humberside airport, (b) Bournemouth Hurn airport, (c) Aldergrove airport and (d) other United Kingdom airports; and if he will make a statement;

(2) how many (a) calves and (b) sheep and lambs have been exported since 1 October 1994 from (i) Poole, (ii) Portsmouth, (iii) Plymouth, (iv) Grimsby, (v) Dover, (vi) Newhaven (vii) Fishguard, (viii) Holyhead, (ix) Shoreham-on-Sea, (x) Sheerness and (xi) other United Kingdom ports; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Browning: The information is not collected centrally but the hon. Member will know that the export of live animals for slaughter or further fattening on new routes is allowed only when we are satisfied with the arrangements for protecting the welfare of the animals.

No shipments of these categories of animal have been authorised since 1 October from the ports of Newhaven, Shoreham-on-Sea and Sheerness.

My right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland has advised that three consignments of calves have been exported from Aldergrove airport.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will place in the Library the account of the Government veterinary surgeon of the first flight of calves from Bournemouth Hurn airport.

Mrs. Browning: I will write to the hon. Member shortly with a full account of the journey.

Agriculture Council

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Blaenau Gwent (Mr. Smith) of 17 October, Official Report, column 142, what was the nature of the French memorandum briefly discussed in any other business at the Agriculture Council meeting in Brussels on 20 September; and what were the French proposals on the future of European agriculture.

Mr. Jack: The memorandum, tabled by the French Agriculture Minister, is entitled "Ambitions for European Agriculture". It includes various ideas on the implementation of GATT obligations in relation to market access and exports, and points to the need both for further simplification of the common agricultural policy and for greater stress on subsidiarity. The memorandum also argues for a reduction in the set-aside rate for 1994–95, which was the subject of a Commission proposal discussed at the Council on 24–25 October.

Departmental Property

Mr. Byers: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what properties are owned or leased by his Department for the use of Ministers; what was the total running cost for each property for the latest year available broken down into (a) furniture and fittings, (b) maintenance, (c) staffing, including the number of butlers, cooks and housekeepers, (d) food and hospitality and (e) other costs; what is the estimated value of each property; and how many times in the latest year the property was stayed in overnight by a Minister.

Mr. Waldegrave: Excluding departmental offices, the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food does not own or lease any property for the use of Ministers.

Sheep Annual Premium Scheme

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many farmers in England have not yet received payment of their advance payments with respect to the 1994 sheep annual premium scheme.

Mr. Jack: As at 28 October 1994 first and second advance payments of 1994 sheep annual premium have been made on 36,300 claims, 92 per cent. of all non-rejected claims received. The number of unpaid claims is 3,164. Payment on the majority of outstanding claims will be made when allocations from the national reserve of quota are made and, in some cases, once producers have been given a further opportunity to acquire quota in the second transfer and lease period.

Dioxins

Ms Armstrong: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made as to whether current tests properly identify the presence of dioxins in (a) milk and (b) elsewhere in the food chain.

Mrs. Browning: The Ministry's analysis of dioxins in milk and other foods has been conducted by the Central Science Laboratory's food science laboratory in Norwich. All the data that the laboratory has provided on dioxins in food meet strict, published acceptance criteria. Furthermore, the laboratory has demonstrated in independent, international inter-laboratory trials that its data are accurate and reliable. As a result, the laboratory is highly regarded by other analysts, enforcement authorities, and researchers in the broader scientific community. I am satisfied that the analysis conducted for the Ministry properly identifies and quantifies dioxins in food.

Castle Cement Works

Ms Armstrong: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will publish results of the monitoring of the effects of emissions from Castle Cement Works on the food chain.

Mrs. Browning: The results were announced in the October 1994 issue of the "Food Safety Information Bulletin". Full details of the work and the analytical results are given in the supplementary food surveillance information sheet No. 44 and have been made available to the relevant local authority and other interested parties. I have placed copies of the bulletin and information sheet in the Library.

Castle Cement Works

Ms Armstrong: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps his Department are taking to continue monitoring (a) the Castle Cement Works plant and (b) other plants where recycled liquid fuel is being burnt.

Mrs Browning: Tests on samples of cows' milk taken in July this year from farms around the Castle Cement Works in Clitheroe gave no indication of any elevation in levels of dioxins, heavy metals or arsenic. The Ministry has no plans for further monitoring around the Castle Cement Works or any other plants where similar fuel is used.

Spencer Stuart Consultants

Mr. Byers: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many contracts his Department or Government agencies responsible to his Department have entered into with Spencer Stuart consultants in the last two years.

Mr. Jack: From the Ministry's central records, excluding Agencies, covering the financial year 1990–91 to 1993–94 inclusive, no contracts were entered into with Spencer Stuart consultants. Full returns for the financial year 1994–95 are not due until May 1995. For Government agencies responsible to the Minister, information is currently being gathered and I will write to the hon. Member as soon as this is available.

Fisheries Council

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what issues he expects to discuss at the forthcoming Fisheries Council meeting.

Mr. Jack: The Council agenda has not yet been finalised but it is expected to include further discussions on future arrangements for access and control in western waters' fisheries, and a first discussion of a proposed amendment to the basic market regulation. The Commission is also likely to make proposals on tariff arrangements for a limited range of imports and on prices for fish and fish products for 1995.

Market Testing

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is his current calculation of the costs of preparation for market testing in his Department in terms of (a) payments to consultants and (b) other costs.

Mr. Jack: I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Drift Nets

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement about the results of the current European drift net regulation limiting their length to 2.5 km.

Mr. Jack: The derogation which allowed certain French vessels to use drift nets up to 5 km in length lapsed on 31 December 1993. Subsequently, all EU vessels have been required to use drift nets which do not exceed 2·5 km long—except in the Baltic which is managed by the International Baltic Sea Commission. This rule was applied in the north-east Atlantic fishery during the 1994 season, when French, Irish and United Kingdom vessels fished with draft nets. Subsequent consideration of this matter will be guided by the results of further scientific guidance.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture Fisheries and Food (1) what is his policy on the motion agreed by the European Parliament on 29 September to ban the use of drift nets beyond EU member state's 12-mile zones; whether he expects this proposal to be raised at the next Fisheries Council meeting; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what plans there are to improve the enforcement of current regulations on the use of drift nets in European waters; and if he will make a statement;

(3) what plans there are to ban the use of drift nets in European waters; if he will be supporting these; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jack: The Government's view is that drift nets up to 2·5 km long should continue to be legally acceptable both in coastal waters and elsewhere in the absence of scientific evidence that demonstrates a case for a ban; but that there is no justification for nets to be used which are more than 2·5 km long. The European Parliament's view that drift nets used in member state's 12-mile limit should be specifically authorised by the Commission appears to be unnecessarily bureaucratic and inconsistent with subsidiarity. We support cost-effective and practical enforcement arrangements, and discussions on this will take place before next year's fishery opens.

Decisions on the Commission's proposal are not expected to be made by the Council in the advance of further work which has been commissioned from the EU's scientific technical and economic committee on fisheries which is scheduled to meet in December.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what research has been carried out into the social effects on traditional fishing communities of the use of drift nets in European waters;

(2) what research has been carried out into the effects of the use of drift nets in European waters on the population of (a) the striped dolphin and (b) other marine wildlife.

Mr. Jack: I am not aware of any research into the social effects on traditional fishing communities of the use of drift nets in European Waters, although the Commission's report on drift nets issued in April 1994 refers to the difficulties that certain communities would experience if drift netting was to be banned, because they are so dependent on drift net fisheries. IFREMER, the French marine research institute, reported last year on its research work into the effects of drift nets on a range of marine creatures including striped dolphins.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many drift nets in use by (a) United Kingdom, (b) Irish, (c) French and (d) Spanish fishing vessels were measured by the north-east Atlantic tuna fishery this summer; which was the longest drift net recorded and how many times it was measured; how and by whom this net was measured (i) at sea and (ii) on land; and what lengths were recorded on each occasion.

Mr. Jack: The only information of net measurement that we hold is carried out by the United Kingdom fisheries inspectorate. We measured 13 nets. The longest net recorded was 3 km.

Farming Subsidies

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the current average subsidy paid to farmers in the United Kingdom from all Government and European Economic Community sources.

Mr. Jack: Farmers benefit from direct payments and through other CAP support measures, but these can change over short periods of time due, for example, to exchange rate fluctuations, so no figure which accords with a current average figure is maintained. However, details of public expenditure under the CAP and on national grants and subsidies are contained in table 9.1 of "Agriculture in the United Kingdom 1993", a copy of which is in the Library of the House.

Set-aside Land

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what is the current payment per acre for set-aside land; and what is the total amount which he expects to pay to British farmers for this arrangement in the current year;

(2) on what grounds he has proposed to the Commission that recipients of the set-aside scheme should be permitted to grow trees on such land;

(3) if he will make a statement outlining the subsidies, grants and allowances which are available for the growing of trees in the United Kingdom; and if such payments would be available to occupiers of set-aside land in the event of the Commission agreeing to his proposals for the flexible use of set-aside land.

Mr. Jack: I will write to the hon. Member.

Less Favoured Areas

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his predecessor's answer of 20 April, Official Report, column 564, if he will provide an amended table to the numbers of workers on agricultural holdings encompassing (a) all agricultural holdings in the less favoured areas, including those beneath eight ESUs and (b) all part-time workers, including those employed on farms beneath eight ESUs; and if he will provide a further breakdown for each district authority which features less favoured area land within its boundaries.

Mr. Waldegrave [holding answer 24 October 1994]: The table provides the information requested for the counties in England. I will write to the hon. Member with details for local government districts.

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his predecessor's answer of 24 May, Official Report, column 145, if he will provide a further breakdown for each local government district authority of the number of less favoured area holdings.

Mr. Waldegrave: I will write to the hon. Member with the information as soon as possible.

Gulf War Syndrome

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of evidence suggesting a link between exposure to organo-phosphorous pesticides used for delousing during the Gulf war, and Gulf war syndrome; and what plans his Department has to take steps to outlaw the use of organo-phosphorous pesticides.

Mrs. Browning: I have made no assessment of this suggested link and have no plans to ban the use of organo-phosphorous pesticides. Pesticides cannot be marketed or used in the United Kingdom unless shown to be effective, humane and to pose no unacceptable risks to humans, non-target species or the environment. Pesticides are also routinely reviewed and may be reviewed urgently if new evidence emerges.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Sir Peter Emery: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will press the European Commission to lift without delay the export ban on animals exposed to BSE.

Mrs. Browning: I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Benefits (Savings)

Sir Ralph Howell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what would be the saving in the whole range of social security benefits, including unemployment benefit and training payments, and exemption from prescription charges and other associated benefits, if everybody who was fit and able to work were deemed to have earned £120 per week between the ages of 18 years of age and state retirement age, and if all young people between 16 and 17 years of age were deemed to have earned £60 per week.

Mr. Roger Evans: I will write to my hon. Friend shortly.

Incomes

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the percentage change in income since 1990 before and after housing costs, of each decile group in the population.

Mr. Burt: The latest available information is given in the table. The data source is the Department of Social Security's households below average income—HBAI—analysis.

A copy of the latest edition is in the Library.

Data are for the combined years 1990 and 1991 (1990–91) and 1991 and 1992 (1991–92) as in the publication. This is in line with HBAIs stocktaking report of November 1991 which recommended that two years' data be combined to improve the accuracy of estimates. However, small changes from period to period are unlikely to be significant.

Percentage change in real income for each decile group, 1990–91 to 1991–92

Decile 1 (bottom decile)	(1)	(–4)
Decile 2	1	0
Decile 3	(0)	(–1)
Decile 4	(–1)	(0)
Decile 5	(0)	(1)
Decile 6	(0)	(1)
Decile 8	0	(1)
Decile 9	(0)	(1)
Decile 10	(0)	(0)

Small changes from 1990–91 to 1991–92 are unlikely to be significant.

Figures in brackets are particularly uncertain; the range in which the true change lies is greater than +/– 2·5 percentage points and greater than 30 per cent. of the estimate.

Figures are rounded to the nearest whole per cent.

Income Support

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people (a) below the age of 20 years, (b) aged 20 to 29 years and (c) aged 30 years or over without accommodation were in receipt of income support in Scotland at the latest available date; and how many of them were unemployed at the time.

Mr. Roger Evans: Since publication of income support statistics for May 1991, collation of this information in local benefit offices is no longer undertaken by clerical means but by the income support computer system. However, although all main functions are in place, work is incomplete on some functions less central to everyday operation. This includes the process to retrieve information on claimants without accommodation. Steps have been taken to introduce an appropriate retrieval process from the May 1994 statistical inquiry, information from which is expected to be available in early 1995.

Figures for May 1991 show that there were 1,000 income support recipients in Scotland without accommodation.

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimates have been made of the take-up rate of income support by those potentially able to apply in the 55 to 65 years age group of (a) men and (b) women.

Mr. Roger Evans: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Crewe and Nantwich (Mrs. Dunwoody) on 21 June at column 142.

Mr. Eddie Chapman

Mr. Allason: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what measures have been taken in response to the appeal for financial assistance from Mr. Eddie Chapman.

Mr. Arbuthnot: This is a matter for Mr. Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the War Pensions Agency. He will write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Rupert Allason, dated 2 November 1994:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the response to the appeal for financial assistance from Mr. Arnold Edward Chapman.

You may recall that I wrote to you on 19 July 1994 to say that a claim form had been sent to Mr. Chapman so that he could claim a War Disablement Pension. The completed form was not returned by Mr. Chapman until 19 October and then only after follow up action by the Agency.

Mr. Chapman's claim is now being considered and I will keep you informed of progress.

I hope you find my reply helpful.

Habitual Residence Test

Ms Gordon: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the estimated administration cost of the habitual residence test from 1 August 1994 to 1 August 1995; and what is the amount of income support the Government estimate will be saved by the application of this test.

Mr. Roger Evans: The estimated annual cost to the Benefits Agency of administering the habitual residence test is £368,000. The estimated income support saving for the same period is in excess of £7 million.

Disability Living Allowance

Mr. Mike O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what medical assessment is made of persons whose disability living allowance is now to be determined on the middle rate which was previously determined at a higher rate;

(2) when he introduced a middle rate on disability living allowance; and how many people have been affected by the introduction of such a rate.

Mr. Hague: Disability living allowance was introduced on 1 April 1992 with three rates of the care component and two rates of the mobility component. The higher and middle rates of the care components are the same as the higher and lower rates of the old attendance allowance. The higher rate of the mobility component is the same as the old mobility allowance. On the introduction of the new benefit we took the opportunity to introduce a new lower rate for each component to extend the new arrangements to people who were unable to qualify for help before. The table shows the number of awards of the different rates of each component since February 1992 when claims could first be made.

A key feature of the adjudication system for disability living allowance is self-assessment. However, a claimant can ask to be examined by an examining medical practitioner if he or she wishes. Whether an adjudication officer seeks a medical report depends on the particular circumstances of the case.

Awards of DLA by component
1 February 1992 to 30 September 1994

Component	Number of awards
Higher rate care	141,221
Middle rate care	147,065
Lower rate care	231,878
Higher rate mobility	375,611
Lower rate mobility	189,584

Note:

The figures are the number of components awarded and include top-up claims. Some people may receive both components

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what percentage of (a) reviews and (b) appeals were (i) successful and (ii) unsuccessful in each year since 1992–93 and the first quarter of 1994–95 for (1) care and (2) mobility components of (x) disability living allowance and (y) attendance allowance.

Child Support Agency

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will investigate urgently reports that staff of the Child Support Agency are improperly disposing of correspondence.

Mr. Burt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for Miss Ann Chant, the chief executive. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Miss Ann Chant to Mrs. Gwyneth Dunwoody, dated 3 November 1994:

I am replying to your recent Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about the disposal of correspondence in the Child Support Agency.

Stories reported in the press stem from the fact that four files were found at the bottom of the lift shaft in the Agency's centre at Dudley earlier this year. No other correspondence has been found in comparable circumstances.

The Agency's regional centres will typically receive some thousands of items of post each week, every one of which is recorded by registration staff before being sent to the appropriate section for action. Any evidence of post being disposed of improperly would be fully investigated, and disciplinary action taken as appropriate in the circumstances.

I hope this reply is helpful, but if you want further information I will be happy to write to you further.

Mr. Mills: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many employees of the Child Support Agency have been sent on outward bound courses since the agency was established; what was the cost per employee; and what was the total cost; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Burt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for Miss Ann Chant, the chief executive. She will write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Miss Ann Chant to Mr. Iain Mills, dated 3 November 1994:

I am replying to your recent Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about the number of employees the Child Support Agency has sent on "outward bound" courses.

No member of the Agency's staff has been sent on an outward bound course but, like the whole of the Civil Service and any large employer, the Agency does on occasion send suitable management staff on external developmental training courses—including Outward Bound Trust "City Challenge" courses. Such courses may contain an element of outdoor activity.

I hope that this reply is helpful, but if you want further information, I will be happy to write to you further.

Mr. Jonathan Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many deductions from earnings orders were made by the Child Support Agency in the year 1993–94; and what proportion of these were in relation to interim assessments.

Mr. Burt [pursuant to his reply, 21 July 1994, column 616–17]: Ann Chant, the chief executive of the Child Support Agency, has written further to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Miss Ann Chant to Mr. Jonathan Evans, dated 3 November 1994:

On 21 July, John Hughes, the Business Development Director, wrote to you in reply to PQ 2406/1993–94 which concerned the number of Deductions from Earnings Orders made by the Child Support Agency during 1993–94.

Due to a typographical error, you were incorrectly advised that 2,200 such orders were issued. The correct figure is 2,600.

Please accept my apologies for this error.

Mr. Cann: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many interviews have now been carried out by each benefits agency branch office to investigate whether a person should be required to co-operate with the Child Support Agency.

Mr. Burt: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for Miss Ann Chant, the chief executive. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Miss Ann Chant to Mr. Jamie, Cann dated 2 November 1994:

I am replying to your recent Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about the number of interviews the Child Support Agency has carried out in relation to the requirement to co-operate.

Information is not available in the form you request, but I can tell you that to the end of August 1994, over 82,000 interviews had been undertaken by the Agency concerning the requirement to co-operate.

I hope this reply is helpful.

Pension Application Form

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what considerations led to the decision to include a request for information on the time, place and nature of marriage ceremonies undergone on the form of request for a state pension.

Mr. Arbuthnot: The administration of Retirement Pension is a matter for Mr. Michael Bichard, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Michael Bichard to Mr. David Winnick, dated 3 November 1994:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to our Parliamentary Question about information requested on the time, place and nature of marriage ceremonies in the claim to a state pension.

The state pension claim form is form BR1 and this form does request the date of marriage for a spouse or former spouse. If the form BR1 is being completed by a woman we also request the marriage certificate. This form does not ask for the time, place and nature of marriage ceremonies.

We need to verify the date of marriage if the customer is a married woman claiming wholly or partly on her husband's contributions. In these circumstances it is essential to establish that the woman is married to the person on whose contributions her claim is to be based.

For marriages that took place in the UK where the customer does not supply a certificate with the BR1, a form is sent to her requesting the certificate and giving information on how to obtain it if she does not have it. If this does not result in the production of the certificate a reminder is sent out. This reminder should be completed only if the customer is still unable to supply the certificate and it requests details including the date and place of the marriage, but not of the nature of marriage ceremony. This information is required so that the Benefits Agency can obtain verification of the marriage from the General Registrar's Office.

In cases where marriage took place in a country which permits polygamy details are requested at the time, place and the law, religion or custom under which the marriage was performed. This information is required in order to enable the adjudication officer, whose responsibility it is to decide claims to benefit, to determine whether the marriage in question is monogamous on the day when all the entitlement conditions are satisfied.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Benefit Upratings

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what assessment he has made of whether it would be operationally feasible to base April benefit upratings on the level of prices in a later month than the previous September.

Mr. Hague: The retail prices index information for the previous September is used as the basis for uprating benefits as this is the latest information which can be reasonably taken into account when assessing the Department's future expenditure plans as part of the unified budget process. The use of the September figure also allows the timely award of the new rates from the date of the uprating. We have no plans to change the existing arrangements.

Overpayments

Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will exercise his discretion not to recover an overpayment of sickness benefit and income support from Mr. Steven Heward of 137 Acklam road, Middlesbrough, reference NH398490C.

Mr. Roger Evans: An officer acting on behalf of the Secretary of State has considered the matter carefully and had decided that in the particular circumstances of this case no further action will be taken to recover the overpaid sums from Mr. Heward.

Home Responsibilities Protection Scheme

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many employed (a) women and (b) men are currently earning below the lower earnings limit; and how many of these are covered by the home responsibilities protection scheme.

Mr. Arbuthnot: It is estimated that 2·2 million women and 800,000 men earn less than the lower earnings limit in any week. The number of these covered by the home responsibilities protection scheme is not known, but those who satisfy the normal conditions for caring have potential access to the scheme.

Pensions

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of the number of holders of appropriate personal pensions who are contributing only their national insurance rebate; and if he will provide this information by relation to the income of the holder.

Mr. Arbuthnot: The information is not available in the form requested. The number of APP holders who made no contribution in addition to the DSS payment in the financial year 1992–93—the latest year for which figures are available—was 3,050,000. The number of individuals contracted out of the state earnings-related pension scheme into APP as at 31 March 1993 was 5,004,000.

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the total number of holders of appropriate personal pensions.

Mr. Arbuthnot: The answer is 4,993,930.

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what action he is taking to ensure that those who are holders of appropriate personal pensions but who would be better off rejoining SERPS are advised to do so.

Mr. Arbuthnot: All new appropriate personal pension holders automatically receive a copy of the DSS leaflet "Making the most of your Personal Pension—PP2". The leaflet advises APP holders to monitor continually their pension arrangements in the light of any changes in their circumstances and that they should seek expert financial advice before coming to any decision on whether to alter those arrangements.

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many (a) women and (b) men applied to his Department requesting a projection of their future state pension entitlement in the last year for which figures are available; and how much it cost to provide.

Mr. Arbuthnot: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Crewe and Nantwich (Mrs. Dunwoody) on 22 June at column 184.

Information regarding gender breakdown is not available.

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of the number of holders of appropriate personal pensions who have (a) reduced their contribution to the APP and (b) matched their contributions to their APP in each of the past five years.

Mr. Arbuthnot: The information requested is not available.

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of the number of individuals who have opted out of the state earnings-related pension scheme for whom it would be financially beneficial to rejoin.

Mr. Arbuthnot: The information requested is not available. The decision whether to contract out of SERPS depends on an individual's circumstances. Any appropriate personal pension holder who is concerned that he or she may be better off by rejoining SERPS should contact his or her pension provider.

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish a table showing the projected average income for single (a) female and (b) male pensioners between 1994 and the year 2000 and the projected average full-time earnings over the same future period.

Mr. Arbuthnot: The information requested is not available.

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) if he will update the information on average pensions at retirement given in his answer of 5 May, Official Report, column 615;

(2) what estimate he has made of the number of holders of appropriate personal pensions who have rejoined SERPS in each of the past five years; and if he will provide this information by relation to the income of the holder.

Mr. Arbuthnot: I will write to the hon. Member shortly.

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many (a) women and (b) men reaching retirement age in the years 2000, 2005, 2010 and 2020 the Government estimates will not qualify for a full basic state pension.

Mr. Arbuthnot: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Crewe and Nantwich (Mrs. Dunwoody) on 21 June at column 146.

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of (a) the average amount total payment by employer and employees made on behalf of each member of occupational pension schemes and (b) what is the average annual total payment made by employers and employees on behalf of each member of personal pension schemes; and if he will publish a table indicating these average payments by relation to the income band of pension fund members.

Mr. Arbuthnot: In 1992–93 the average total amount paid by employers for each member of an occupational pension scheme was £1,700. The average total amount paid by each employee was £750.

The average annual total payment made by employers on behalf of each employee holding a personal pension was £90. The average annual total payment made by each employee was £670, including minimum contributions.

Information about average payments by relation to the income band of pension fund members is not available.

Sir Peter Emery: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will, as a matter of urgency, seek to increase the extra pension payment to those who are over 80 years of age.

Mr. Arbuthnot: I will write to my hon. Friend shortly.

Rent Allowance

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his Department's guidance to officials who become aware that housing allowance is not being paid over by the individual concerned to his or her landlord.

Mr. Roger Evans: Where a local authority is made aware that an individual has failed to pay their housing benefit, there is a statutory provision for benefit to be withheld, or for the local authority to commence direct payments to the landlord.

Additionally, there is a mandatory provision for benefit to be paid direct to a landlord where there are eight or more weeks arrears of rent.

Job Seeker's Allowance

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate the number of people in Wales who will experience changes in their income if the job seeker's allowance is introduced.

Mr. Roger Evans: I will write to the hon. Member shortly.

Benefits (Abolition)

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimates his Department have made of the numbers of people in Wales who will be affected by the abolition of income support and unemployment benefit; and, of these, how many will lose their entitlement to benefit after six months, because they have savings or redundancy money or partners in full-time work; how many households will have their income reduced as partners are forced to give up work in order to meet the means test; and how many women will have a change in their status.

Mr. Roger Evans: I will write to the hon. Member shortly.

Severe Disablement Allowance

Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if the entitlement conditions for an adult dependency increase of severe disablement allowance will be the same as those for an increase of incapacity benefit from April 1995.

Mr. Hague: Currently the conditions for receiving an adult dependency increase with severe disablement allowance are the same as for increases of invalidity benefit. We plan to introduce regulations shortly bringing them into line with the rules proposed for incapacity benefit. Under these rules, provision will be better targeted. Increases will be available in cases where: the beneficiary has a spouse who is aged 60 or over; the beneficiary has a spouse aged under 60 and dependent children; there is an adult, other than a spouse, who is caring for the beneficiary's dependent children. As now, there will be no payment where the dependent has earnings above a certain level. The earnings rule will be the same as for long-term incapacity benefit. Increases will continue to be available from the start of the severe disablement allowance award.

The new rules will apply to people claiming severe disablement allowance on or after 13 April 1995. There will be transitional protection for existing beneficiaries in line with that for transitional awards of long-term incapacity benefit.

Departmental Property

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what properties are owned or leased by his Department for the use of Ministers; what was the total running cost for each property for the latest year available broken down into (a) furniture and fittings, (b) maintenance (c) staffing, including the number of butlers, cooks and housekeepers, (d) food and hospitality and (e) other costs; what is the estimated value of each property; and how many times in the latest year the property was stayed in overnight by a minister.

Mr. Hague: Excluding departmental offices, this Department does not own or lease any properties for the use of Ministers.

Invalidity Benefit

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to allow women to receive full invalidity benefit past the age of 60 years.

Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he expects to pay invalidity benefit at the same rate to men and women between the ages of 60 and 65 years.

Mr. Hague: After state pension age, currently 60 for a woman, 65 for a man, the weekly rate of invalidity benefit is based on a person's retirement pension entitlement. We have no plans to change this at present. It has been the position since invalidity benefit was introduced in 1971, and a feature of the national insurance scheme since July 1948.

There is a case before the European Court of Justice concerning the rate of invalidity benefit payable to women on reaching state pension age. A ruling is not expected before July 1995.

From 13 April 1995, invalidity benefit and sickness benefit will be replaced by incapacity benefit. When a person reaches state pension age payment of incapacity benefit will normally cease as retirement pension is the appropriate benefit.

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on the progress of current legal actions in respect of the granting of full invalidity benefit to women past the age of 60 years.

Mr. Hague: The hon. Member is referring to the case of Mrs. Rose Graham, which has been appealed to the Court of Appeal. At a hearing on 18 January 1994, the Court of Appeal decided to refer questions of European law arising in the case of the European Court of Justice. The questions to be referred were agreed by all parties. The court's procedure involves inviting all member states to submit observations on the points at issue. A ruling is not expected before July 1995 at the earliest.

Incapacity Assessment Panel

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 25 October, Official Report, column 564, on what date the members of the panel on assessment of incapacity were informed that their names would be published only with their agreement.

Mr. Hague: A letter was sent to panel members on 25 August 1994, in which they were invited to contact the Department if they did not agree to their names being published in the report "The medical assessment for Incapacity Benefit".

Spencer Stuart Consultants

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many contracts his Department or Government agencies responsible to his Department have entered into with Spencer Stuart consultants in the last two years.

Mr. Hague: None.

Child Benefit

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many families in Wales (a) received child benefit and (b) were eligible to receive it at the latest available date;

(2) how many children there are in families in receipt of child benefit in Wales; and how many there are in families which are eligible.

Mr. Burt: It is estimated that on 31 December 1993 there were 356,575 families in Wales receiving child benefit in respect of 642,400 children. Information on numbers eligible for child benefit is not available, but take-up in Great Britain is estimated to be nearly 100 per cent.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Rwanda

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action is being taken by the United Nations to prevent the reformation of a Rwandan Hutu army within refugee camps.

Mr. Baldry: The UN Secretariat is preparing a consolidated report on the security situation in the refugee camps.

The report, which is due shortly, is expected to cover the possibility of separating out the remnants of the army of the former Rwanda Government and to contain options for international action.

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what precautions he is taking to ensure that aid being provided to Rwandan refugees in Zaire is not used by those responsible for genocide in Rwanda to re-establish their authority; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Baldry: We maintain a close dialogue with the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees. She is considering with donor Governments and other United Nations organisations a number of options to improve security in the camps, to help ensure that emergency aid is delivered unimpeded to the refugees in genuine need.

Turkey

Mr. Austin-Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made recently to (a) the Council of Europe, (b) the European Union, (c) the United Nations and (d) the Committee on Security and Co-operation in Europe, regarding the abuse of human rights by the Government of Turkey.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: We regularly contribute to discussion in international fora on the abuse of human rights in Turkey. The subject was discussed most recently at the CSCE review conference in Budapest.

Mr. Austin-Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received from the Government of Turkey regarding the presence of Mr. Kani Yilmaz in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Davis: No formal representations have been received from the Government of Turkey. We understand the Turkish authorities are aware of Mr. Yilmaz's detention.

Mr. Austin -Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he was first informed of the arrival of Mr. Kani Yilmaz in the United Kingdom.

Mr. David Davis: We were informed on 24 October of the arrival of Mr. Kani Yilmaz in the United Kingdom the previous evening.

Mr. Austin-Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made regarding the imprisonment and requested execution of elected members of the Turkish Parliament.

Mr. David Davis: We have repeatedly made plain to the Turkish authorities the damage that these arrests have done to Turkey's international reputation. Her Majesty's embassy in Ankara is monitoring carefully the trial which began on 3 August. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs also raised the issue of human rights in Turkey with the Prime Minister Mrs. Ciller when they met in Istanbul on 14 October.

Mr. Austin-Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what contact his Department had with Mr. Kani Yilmaz on his previous visits to the United Kingdom.

Mr. David Davis: My Department had no contact with Mr. Kani Yilmaz on his previous visits to the United Kingdom.

Mr. Austin-Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made on whether arms supplied to Turkey by the United Kingdom are being used against the civilian population; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Davis: Proposed arms sales to Turkey, as to other countries, are considered on a case by case basis and are subject to stringent licensing procedures. Before a licence is granted, a number of considerations are taken into account, including an assessment of the recipient country's human rights record. We do not grant licences for the sale of equipment which we believe is likely to be used for internal repression.

Mr. Austin-Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he was first informed of the intention of Mr. Kani Yilmaz to enter the United Kingdom on his most recent visit.

Mr. David Davis: We were not informed of the intention of Mr. Kani Yilmaz to enter the United Kingdom on his most recent visit.

Mr. Austin-Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make representations to other NATO countries and to Pakistan to cease the supply of arms to Turkey, with particular reference to bombs; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Davis: Turkey is a NATO ally and has legitimate defence requirements. All countries, including the United Kingdom, which are members of the EU, NATO and CSCE are guided by common principles on arms sales. It would not be appropriate for Her Majesty's Government to make representations to other countries to cease the supply of arms to Turkey.

Nuclear Weapons

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he is seeking an agreed EU position on the proposal to submit a resolution to the United Nations General Assembly requesting that the International Court of Justice give its advisory opinion on the legal status of the use and the threat of use of nuclear weapons.

Mr. David Davis: We have consulted EU partners who agreed that a United Nations General Assembly resolution on the subject would be inappropriate while the International Court of Justice was already considering a similar appeal from the World Health assembly.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what decisions have been made in the Council of Ministers in respect of the plan of the non-aligned movement to submit a resolution to the United Nations General Assembly requesting that the International Court of Justice give its advisory opinion on the legal status of the use and the threat of use of nuclear weapons.

Mr. David Davis: The issue has not been discussed in the Council of Ministers.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how he will vote in the United Nations General Assembly on the resolution requesting that the International Court of Justice give its advisory opinion on the legal status of the use and the threat of use of nuclear weapons.

Mr. David Davis: The United Kingdom will vote against any such resolutions.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what co-ordination and contacts have been established between the European Union and NATO in respect of the proposal of the non-aligned movement to submit a resolution at the United Nations General Assembly requesting that the International Court of Justice give its advisory opinion on the legal status of the use and the threat of use of nuclear weapons.

Mr. David Davis: There have been no formal contacts between the European Union and NATO on this issue.

China

Mr. Elletson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement about the prospects for an improvement in Sino-British relations (a) pre-1997 and (b) post-1997.

Mr. Goodlad: We aim to intensify our practical co-operation with China on the basis of shared interests both in relation to Hong Kong and more widely. We have put forward a number of proposals to that end and hope that they will provide the basis for an increasingly co-operative long-term relationship.

Departmental Property

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what properties are owned or leased by his Department for the use of Ministers; what was the total running cost for each property for the latest year available broken down into (a) furniture and fittings, (b) maintenance, (c) staffing, including the number of butlers, cooks and housekeepers, (d) food and hospitality and (e) other costs; what is the estimated value of each property; and how many times in the latest year the property was stayed in overnight by a Minister.

Mr. Goodlad: 1 Carlton gardens is leased by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office from the Crown Estate Commissioners. This is for the use of my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary. It is his official London residence.

This is broken down as follows:

(a) Furniture and furnishings £13,750

1 Carlton gardens. Staff are engaged on an ad hoc basis when official hospitality is provided. Twenty-five functions for a total of 519 guests were held in FY 1993–94. £24,157

(ii) Messagerial and security staff provided by the FCO. £107,750

(e) There were no other running costs.

The value of the property is not known; the freehold is owned by the Crown Estate Commissioners. When in London, my right hon. Friend the Foreign Secretary resides at 1 Carlton gardens.

Recruitment

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if questions pertinent to the sexuality of potential recruits to his Department are still being asked during recruitment interviews.

Mr. Goodlad: Yes, in the case of recruits to the diplomatic service, so that homosexual officers maybe given suitable advice before bidding for postings to certain countries where homosexual practices might be illegal or socially unacceptable.

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if his Department operates a policy of non-discrimination against homosexuals in recruitment to all sections of the Department.

Mr. Goodlad: Yes.

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is his Department's policy towards those members of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office who have now admitted their homosexuality, but who were originally recruited when homosexuality was a bar to recruitment to his Department; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Goodlad: Each case is taken on its merits. Officers who concealed during their vetting process the fact that they were homosexual have come forward without any resulting problems. The Department will continue to be as sympathetic as possible in the circumstances of any such cases in the future.

Burma

Sir Thomas Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is now Her Majesty's Government's policy towards Burma; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Goodlad: The situation in Burma remains of great concern. Together with our EU partners we suspended all non-humanitarian official aid in 1988 and imposed an arms embargo in 1991. We have made clear that normalisation of our relations will depend on progress in key areas, including human rights and democratic reform.

Iran

Sir Thomas Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is now Her Majesty's Government's policy towards Iran; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Government policy on Iran remains as stated in my reply to the hon. Member for Liverpool, Riverside (Mr. Parry) on 25 January 1994, at column 144–45.

Spencer Stuart Consultants

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many contracts his Department or Government agencies responsible to his Department have entered into with Spencer Stuart consultants in the last two years.

Mr. Goodlad: The FCO and ODA can find no record of any contracts with Spencer Stuart in the last two years.

Western Sahara

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what plans Her Majesty's Government have to expand the scope of operations designed to register Sahrawi voters and ensure that the referendum for self-determination in Western Sahara is carried out in a fair and democratic manner, and is free from either intimidation or manipulation by the Moroccan Government; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what plans Her Majesty's Government have to encourage negotiations between the Polisario and the Moroccan Government prior to the 1995 United Nations referendum in Moroccan-held territory;

(3) if he will make a statement regarding the exclusion of the international media and other independent observers from Western Sahara by the Government of Morocco;

(4) what plans Her Majesty's Government have to prevent the harassment by the Moroccan military of Sahrawis who attempt to register to vote in the 1995 United Nations referendum in Moroccan-held territory; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I will write to the hon. Member.

Market Testing

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is his current calculation of the costs of preparation for market testing in his Department in terms of (a) payments to consultants and (b) other costs.

Mr. Goodlad: The cost of payments by the FCO to consultants for preparation for market testing between 1 April 1992 and 30 June 1994 was £277,272. Other departmental central support costs were £679,970.

Mr. David Davis: I will write to the hon. Member.

Iraq

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has had from Sir Terence Clark, the ambassador to Iraq from 1985 to 1989, about the condition of Her Majesty's embassy in Baghdad; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Douglas Hogg: No such representations have been received, though we are aware of Sir T. Clarke's concerns.

Remedial work on the embassy is unfortunately impractical in present circumstances.

Atomic Energy

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) for what reason it has been proposed to extend article III bis to the Anglo-American mutual defence agreement on atomic energy matters, of 3 July 1958; what criteria were adopted for deciding on a 10-year extension; and if he will make a statement;

(2) when Her Majesty's Government first received the proposed amendments from the United States Government to the agreement between the United Kingdom and United States on the co-operation on the uses of atomic energy for mutual defence purposes, of 3 July 1958, as published by the United States President on 23 May 1994;

(3) what plans he has to lay before Parliament the proposed amendments to the agreement for the co-operation on the uses of atomic energy for mutual defence purposes between the United States and United Kingdom of 3 July 1958;

(4) what is the reason for introducing the proposed amendment F to article VI of the United States-United Kingdom agreement for the co-operation on the uses of atomic energy for mutual defence purposes, of 3 July 1958; and if he will make a statement on the adequacy of material control and accountability to date in the implementation of the agreement.

Both GCHQ and the Secret Intelligence Service operate an equal opportunities policy. Recruitment and promotion are based on merit, not gender.

Mr. Hurd: We are continuing to develop encryption technology for Government and public service communications.

The remainder were still being processed as at 31 December 1993.

European Court of Justice

Mr. Cash: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list those parts of the treaty of Rome and other treaties which confer jurisdiction to the European Court of Justice over defence matters.

Mr. David Davis [holding answer 1 November 1994]: The European Court of Justice has no jurisdiction over the provisions of the Maastricht treaty which refer to defence-article B and article J.4. The ECJ does have jurisdiction to interpret articles 36, 48, 56, 66, 223, 224 and 225 of the treaty of Rome which deal with derogations from the treaty justified on grounds on public or national security. There are similar provisions in international agreements relating to the Communities such as certain co-operation agreements and the European economic area agreement, as well as the technical security provisions in articles 24, 25, 27, 28 and 84 of the European atomic energy treaty.

EDUCATION

Grant-Maintained Schools

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what was the total number of grant-maintained schools eligible to submit bids for capital grant allocations for named projects in each year from 1990–91 to 1994–95.

Mr. Robin Squire: Total numbers of GM schools operating on 1 January in each of the last five years are as follows:

Year	Number of GM schools
1990	20
1991	50
1992	142
1993	333
1994	812

All of these schools were wholly eligible to bid for capital grant allocations in each of the financial years after which they became grant-maintained, and eligible to varying degrees, depending on their actual date of incorporation, to bid in the financial year in which they became grant-maintained.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what applications have been received from promoters for the establishment of new grant-maintained schools under section 49 of the Education Act 1993; and, in each case, what is the character of the proposed school.

Mr. Robin Squire: Two proposals have been received from promoters for the establishment of new grant-maintained schools under section 49 of the Education Act 1993. One, published on 14 October, is for the establishment of a Jewish secondary school in Leeds for boys and girls aged 11 to 18. The other, published on 17 October, is for the establishment of an interdemoninational Christian school in Bradley Stoke, Avon for boys and girls aged five to 16.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education which grant-maintained schools have applied for a change of character; and, in each case, what was the nature of the change and what was her decision.

Mr. Robin Squire: I have placed in the Library a table that lists by category of change proposed, the grant-maintained schools which have published statutory proposals for a significant change of character or significant enlargement, and gives the decision where one has been made.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what is the total number of parental ballots on grant-maintained status which have taken place in (a) the primary and (b) the secondary sector; and, in each case, how many of these have resulted in a majority of eligible parents voting in favour of grant-maintained status.

Mr. Robin Squire: The information requested is as follows:

Type of School	Number of ballots on GM status	Number of ballots with a majority of eligible parents voting in favour
Primary	625	286
Secondary	913	284

The governing body of a school is required to publish proposals for grant-maintained status if the majority of those eligible parents who vote in a ballot are in favour of so doing. If fewer than 50 per cent. of eligible parents vote a second ballot is required. To date, 75 per cent. of parental ballots at primary schools and 73 per cent. at secondary schools have resulted in a vote in favour of seeking grant-maintained status.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education (1) what was the total number of grant-maintained schools which submitted bids for capital grant allocations for named projects in each year from 1990–91 to 1994–95;

(2) what was the total value of bids submitted by grant-maintained schools for capital grant for named projects in each year from 1990–1 to 1994–95;

(4) what was the total value of capital grant allocations to grant-maintained schools for named projects in each year from 1990–91 to 1994–95;

(5) what was the total number of schools new to the grant-maintained sector since the previous year for which a capital grant allocation for named projects was approved in each year from 1990–91 to 1994–95.

Mr. Robin Squire: I will write to the hon. Member with the information requested as soon as possible.

Numbers shown are derived from the Department for Education's annual schools' census, with part-time primary pupils included as full-time equivalents. All figures are rounded to the nearest 50.

Overseas Students

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education, pursuant to her answer of 24 October, Official Report, column 416, how much funding will be made available to students from the United States of America to study in the United Kingdom in 1994–95.

Mr. Boswell: Students from the United States of America will receive £3·001 million of Government funding in financial year 1994–95, which is made up from DFE, FCO and British Council scholarship schemes for overseas students.

Russell Group

Ms Gordon: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what plans she has to concentrate funding for research to a group of 10 universities.

Mr. Boswell: None. The Government's 1991 White Paper "Higher Education: A New Framework" stated that, while research funds should be allocated selectively on the basis of assessment of research quality, all higher education institutions should be able to compete for those funds. Some will inevitably succeed more than others in the competition, but all remain eligible for funding.

School Books

Ms Gordon: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what was the expenditure on school books, in real terms, for each year since 1979.

Mr. Robin Squire: Total expenditure on books and equipment in local authorities' maintained nursery, primary and secondary schools is shown in the following table. Not all authorities' returns identify spending on books separately. Figures are in constant—1993–94—prices.

1980–81	374·2
1981–82	370·8

1988–89	435·7
1989–90	461·6
1990–91	441·0
1991–92	511·0
1992–93	523·4

The figures do not include returns in respect of grant-maintained or independent schools.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what was the total value of the formula allocation of capital grant in each year from 1990–91 to 1994–95.

Mr. Robin Squire: Capital allocations within the Department's programme take the form either of annual capital guidelines to local authorities or of capital grant, which for the most part is disbursed by the Higher Education and Further Education funding councils and the Funding Agency for Schools. The total value of the main formula elements within the grant component is set out as follows. It covers grants to grant-maintained and voluntary-aided schools, higher education institutions and further education institutions.

Formula allocation of capital grant: total value

1990–91	173·3
1991–92	189·0
1992–93	225·7
1993–94	314·4
1994–95	323·3

School Buildings

Ms Gordon: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how much has been spent on repair and maintenance on school buildings, in real terms, in each year since 1979.

Mr. Robin Squire: I will write to the hon. Member with the information requested as soon as possible.

Public Opinion Surveys

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Education, pursuant to his answer of 25 October, Official Report, column 524–25, what was the total cost of public opinion surveys conducted since 1 January 1994.

Departmental Property

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what properties are owned or leased by her Department for the use of Ministers; what was the total running cost for each property for the latest year available broken down into (a) furniture and fittings, (b) maintenance, (c) staffing, including the number of butlers, cooks and housekeepers, (d) food and hospitality and (e) other costs; what is the estimated value of each property; and how many times in the latest year the property was stayed in overnight by a Minister.

Mr. Forth: The Department does not own or lease any properties for ministerial use.

Student Grants

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if she will make a statement on the treatment of the child of (a) a co-habiting couple and (b) a married couple in identical financial circumstances when assessment is made of student grant entitlement on the standard scale.

Mr. Boswell: Under the Education (Mandatory Awards) Regulations the assessment of a married student's requirements for the maintenance of his dependants compared with one in identical personal financial circumstances who is cohabiting may vary according to the number of dependants and any income these may have.

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if she will make a statement on the definition of residual income on page 33 of "Student Grants and Loans: A Brief Guide for Higher Education Students 1994–95" as being income after tax and allowances are taken off.

Mr. Boswell: The definition of residual income on page 33 of "Student Grants and Loans: a Brief Guide for Higher Education Students 1994–95" was inaccurate. An erratum slip was issued to all local education authorities immediately after publication. It explained that the correct description of the calculation of residual income appears on page 29 of the booklet. Reprints of the booklet did not include the incorrect definition.

Governors

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Education (1) how many additional governors she has appointed; and at which schools;

(2) how many additional governors she has appointed to grant-maintained schools; if she will list the schools; and what has been the total cost to date of such appointments.

Mr. Robin Squire: By virtue of section 67 of the Education Act 1993, which re-enacts section 53(6) of the Education Reform Act 1988, the Secretary of State has the power in certain circumstances to appoint additional governors to grant-maintained schools only. Four such appointments have been made, all to Stratford grant-maintained school. There has been no cost to the Department.

Stuart Spencer Consultants

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how many contracts her Department or Government agencies responsible to her Department have entered into with Spencer Stuart consultants in the last two years.

Mr. Forth: None.

Market Testing

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what is her current calculation of the costs of preparation for market testing in her Department in terms of (a) payments to consultants and (b) other costs.

Mr. Boswell: The figures requested are £280,000 on consultancy fees in support of the Department's market testing programme and £184,000 on departmental support costs up to the end of June 1994.

Secondary Schools

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if she will list for each local education authority area, (a) the total number of secondary schools, (b) how many of these are, or if grant-maintained, were, (i) county, (ii) voluntary aided, (iii) special agreement and (iv) voluntary controlled, (c) how many have held parental ballots on grant-maintained status, (d) how many are operating as grant-maintained schools and (e) what percentage of pupils are in grant-maintained schools.

Mr. Robin Squire: The information requested cannot be collated in the time available. I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as it is ready.

Teachers (Pay)

Mr. McLoughlin: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if she will list the pay scales for head teachers in primary and secondary schools.

Public Investment Projects

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if she will list those public investment projects within her Department's responsibility which have attracted private capital and which have been commenced since November 1993.

Mr. Robin Squire: The Department for Education is not directly responsible for the disbursement of grants to educational institutions except for allocations to voluntary aided and special agreement schools, technology colleges and to city technology colleges. Information on voluntary aided and special agreement schools is held on a financial year basis only and cannot be adapted to the form requested. City Technology Colleges

BRIT School, Croydon, Surrey

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Education how much private capital has been invested in public investment projects within her Department's responsibility since the 1992 autumn statement.

Mr. Robin Squire: The information requested is not held centrally. The Department keeps records of voluntary aided capital projects all of which have a private component of at least 15 per cent. City technology colleges also receive a large element of private capital input. In both cases we are not able to determine the time the investment was made. Responsibility for other public funded education facilities rests with the funding councils and individual local education authorities.

Universities (Extremist Groups)

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what representations she has received regarding the disruption to university life from the activities of extremist groups.

Mr. Boswell: None, on this specific point.

Physical Education

Ms Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what percentage of primary school teachers have qualifications in physical education; and what plans there are to increase this number.

Mr. Robin Squire: I will write to the hon. Member.

Ms Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what percentage of primary school children receive swimming lessons every school week.

Mr. Forth: The national curriculum specifies that all children should be able to swim 25 m by the age of 11. It is for individual schools to decide how and when to provide swimming lessons in order to meet this requirement and their own priorities for swimming. The information on the percentage of children receiving swimming lessons each week is not collected centrally.

Ms Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what co-ordination he has with other Government Departments in order to facilitate the teaching of team sports in schools.

Mr. Forth: The Government are currently considering ways of enhancing the position of team sports in schools. An announcement will be made in due course. All interested Departments are contributing to the review.

Business and Technology Education Council

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what was the expenditure on administration in 1993–94 of the Business and Technology Education Council.

Mr. Boswell: The Business and Technology Education Council—BTEC—was established in 1983 to combine and develop the work of the former business education council—BEC—and technician education council—TEC. On 1 October 1993, BTEC ceased to be a non-departmental public body, becoming fully independent. Consequently, its financial arrangements are no longer the responsibility of Secretary of State and now rest with BTEC itself.

Primary Schools

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education if she will list for each local education authority area, (a) the total number of primary schools, (b) how many of these are, or if grant-maintained, were (i) county, (ii) voluntary aided, (iii) special agreement and (iv) voluntary controlled, (c) how many have held parental ballots on grant-maintained status, (d) how many are operating as grant-maintained schools and (e) what percentage of pupils are in grant-maintained schools.

Mr. Robin Squire: The information requested cannot be collated in the time available. I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as it is ready.

Education, Support and Training Programme

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education what is the total value of the grants for education, support and training programme agreed for 1994–95, the value of items which will be wholly or partially delegated to schools, the value of items which must be retained centrally by local education authorities for the provision of services to schools and the value of her Department's grant contribution in each case.

Mr. Robin Squire: The GEST programme for 1994–95 supports LEA expenditure of £270·6 million. The Department pays grant on this expenditure at the rate of 60 per cent. for all grants, except one of £3 million for articled teachers' bursaries which is paid at the rate of 100 per cent. The total grant payable by the Department is £163·6 million.

Of this total, £100·5 million LEA expenditure—£60·3 million DFE grant—must be devolved to schools. LEAs are encouraged to devolve much of the remainder of the programme to school level where this is appropriate.

The only grants which may not be devolved to school level are those for special education needs parent partnership schemes—£3·7 million expenditure, £2·2 million grant—and part of the grant for national curriculum assessment arrangements.

INDEX TO THE

PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES

OFFICIAL REPORT

SIXTH SERIES VOLUME 248

SESSION 1993–94

SCOPE OF THE INDEX, ARRANGEMENT AND ABBREVIATIONS

This index is derived from the House of Commons Library's Parliamentary On-Line Information System (POLIS), and the subject terms used are based on those used in POLIS. There are often changes in column numbering, etc., between the daily part or weekly Hansard (which simply collects together the daily parts without revision) and the bound volume. The index for the bound volume is revised to take account of these changes and cannot therefore, be used in connection with the daily part or weekly Hansard. For these versions use the Fortnightly Index.

Scope and arrangement of the Index

Oral and Written Parliamentary Questions are indexed under subject headings and the names of Members asking and Ministers replying to them. Questions are not listed under the names of Departments replying. Departmental listings can be arrived at indirectly by looking under the names of the Minister(s) of that Department. There are, however, the headings 'Northern Ireland', 'Scotland', and 'Wales' under which one can find not only most Questions answered by the Northern Ireland Office, Scottish Office, Welsh Office but also Questions about these areas of the United Kingdom which are answered by other Departments. Ministerial statements are indexed under subject headings, under 'Ministerial statements' and the names of Ministers making them and Members speaking on them. General debates are indexed under broad subject headings and under the names of all Members and Ministers taking part. Debates on legislation (Bills, Orders, Regulations etc.) are indexed under the name of the Bill, Statutory Instruments etc, under subject headings and under the names of those taking part.

Rulings and Statements by Speaker and deputies are brought together under the heading 'Speaker's rulings and statements'.

Other contributions by Speaker and deputies appear under the heading Speaker.

Opposition Day Debates and Estimates Day Debates and Standing Order No. 10 applications are listed under those respective headings and under subject headings too.

The date of each item except Parliamentary Questions is inserted immediately before the reference.

Members' names are given in the form by which they prefer to be known and are printed in bold italics. Under their names, entries are arranged under one of the two headings Debates, etc. (to include interventions on statements, points of order and so on) or Questions.

Abbreviations

Bills 1R = first reading, 2R = second reading, Money res = money resolution, Comm = Committee stage, Rep = Report stage, 3R = third reading, amendt/amendts = amendment/amendments, * = matter taken formally, without debate.

Column numbers followed by the letter W refer to Written Questions. These appear at the end of each daily part or volume with their own sequence of column numbers printed in italics.
